SISTER GIVES FORTUNE TO AID MRS. EATON

OVATION TO MILITANT TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The "votes-for-women" legions in New York will give a stupendous welcome to Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British militant leader, at Madison Square Garden tonight. The gathering will take the place of the Carnegie Hall and the Garden meetings previously announced.

In her address tonight Mrs. Pankhurst will answer criticisms made against her here and abroad. While in New York she will remain a guest of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont at No. 147 Madison avenue.

On Friday she leaves for Cleveland.

Mrs. Pankhurst received a numbered of suffragette leaders at Mrs. Belmont's home today. When one of them asked if she would call on President Wilson when she visited Washington, Mrs. Pankhurst said:

"I shall call to see the President only if the President expresses a desire to see me. Your President is a very busy man.

"I shall be in Washington only a short time. I should esteem it an honor of course to see him but I shall not go to the White House for such a purpose unless he asks that I do so."

Charles Edward Russell, Socialist candidate for Mayor, will introduce Mrs. Pankhurst tonight, and on the platform with the militant leader will be many prominent suffrage workers, including representatives of the Woman's Political Union, the Political Equality League, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Beach, Mrs. Rhetta Childe Dorr, Mrs. Mary Thornton, the Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw and Miss Jean Wickham.

Asks Court to Impound a Step

WantWant One His Mother Slipped on and Was Killed.

Michael F. Driscoll asked Judge Crosby in the Equity Court today to impound a step—one of a flight of steps.

Courts are often asked to impound or lock up papers, especially in divorce cases. But impounding a step is new.

Driscoll said, in his motion, that his mother, the late Mrs. Margaret Driscoll, was descending an outside stairway at No. 222 Commercial street on February 17 last, that she slipped on a step, fell and died from injuries then received. Driscoll, as administrator, has started suit for $15,000 against the Lewis Wharf Company as owners.

Driscoll says the step has been removed and put in the defendant's storeroom. He believes it needful to his case.

Nothing but chatter was being heard at the Laboratory Kitchen lunch rooms at Bedford and Kingston streets this noon and the "Vegetable Special" was going fine when somebody shrieked "Fire!" Sure enough—a large awning was ablaze out front. Miss Vera Warren, one of the waiters, sent in an alarm. Rose, Nellie, Kittie and the other comely waitresses calmly stood by the slider and paper missed an order. A flotilla of fire apparatus arrived and the damage was confined to a large hole in the awning.

MRS. THAW PROUD OF HER SON

Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, Harry Thaw's mother, broke a seven-year silence when she gave the interview below to the AMERICAN.

The gentle old lady, who has won the respect and affection of her Pittsburgh neighbors in the face of the most trying circumstances, is a remarkable example of force, undying hope and maternal devotion.

In Boston today, on her way to Pittsburgh, she said that she was preparing a new step to aid Harry Thaw in his fight.

Mrs. Thaw in this remarkable interview begs that the Thaw money be left out of the question of Harry's fate—that he be treated like any other man. She told with quiet motherly enjoyment of the boyish kindnesses he had done and his constant thought for others.

"I am proud of many of Harry's qualities," she added, "but perhaps, most of all, of his rather unusual intellectual qualities and his ability to analyze conditions."

She told of her plans for Harry's future after he gains his freedom, and quoted many remarkable letters of sympathy and cheer which have come to her or to Harry during the last seven years. Here is the interview:

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

A sweet-faced, white-haired woman is waging a battle royal, but so quietly that few, if any, know of her work.

This woman is Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, who, though claiming she never interferes with any of his legal affairs in any way, uses every moment to support and encourage him.

When I talked with Mrs. Thaw yesterday I helped her break a rule which she made seven years ago, never to be interviewed by anyone.

"Many of my friends have urged me during the past seven years," this alert, kindly-faced woman said, "to allow some one, if I would not do it myself, to controvert the calumny regarding the Thaw family and 'Thaw money,' and to tell some of the life work accomplished by Mr. Thaw and myself. But the idea was so distasteful to me that not until after the assault made upon my family by the former District Attorney of New York at the hearing before Governor Folker did I resolve that not only in the interest of my son but for the honor of the family as a whole, something of the kind was demanded.

"Among the many letters which I will give you to show the sentiments of some of the most prominent men of the country regarding my son and the family is one from Dr. Francis L. Patton, former president of Princeton University, who knows Harry very well. Dr. Patton has visited several times at our home in Pittsburgh and went to see Harry several times while he was at Matteawan. In a letter written in regard to Harry Thaw's mental gifts and his mother's interest in philanthropic work Dr. Patton says:

Dr. Patton's Tribute.

I have a good illustration of the first: When on a certain occasion, a few years ago, I dined at Lyndhurst, in the company of Dr. Brashear and others, the conversation turned on matters of physics, a subject of which I was ignorant. I noticed that Mr. Thaw held his own remarkably well, and was astonished at the extent of his knowledge on that subject. I was equally surprised to find that he acquitted himself quite as well when the conversation drifted into the

Mother Says Thaw Will Work Out Own Destiny

"Have you any plans for your son when he is freed—any ambitions for him"

"He will come to his home and work out his destiny as best he can. He is well able to plan his own life. We have nothing definite in mind except to live on and do as much as we can to make others happy as well as to be happy ourselves. I never plan far ahead."—From Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw's talk with Constance Williams of the Boston AMERICAN.

Save Suicide Family from Potters Field

Dr. Dixwell Pays for Funeral of Mrs. Johnson and Children.

The bodies of Mrs. F. J. Johnson and her two children, who were found dead at their home in Chelsea from gas poisoning, a week ago, were saved from Potters Field by Dr. John Dixwell of the West End, who offered to pay all the funeral expenses. The burial will be in Mt. Benedict Cemetery.

Captain Fitzroy Grover, acting chief of the Chelsea police, today received a letter from the husband of the deceased woman, asking that the bodies be taken care of in accordance with the law in such cases. He told of his illness and that his funds were gone and that he was at present being helped by friends.

From the tone of his letter he evidently thought that his wife died from a surgical operation. He referred several times to blood poisoning and to cancer.

NEIGHBORS TELL OF WIDOW'S STORIES ABOUT ADMIRAL

That a rich sister was sacrificing a fortune to save Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, accused of the murder of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, became known today.

The defence end of the trial of the accused widow in Plymouth County is very expensive. She has able counsel and high priced experts retained to clear herself of the charge of poisoning her husband.

MUCH SPECULATION AS TO FUNDS

There has been much speculation as to where the money to pay these big bills was coming from. Mrs. Eaton's lawyers would not tell. They only smiled when asked where their pay was coming from. Mrs. Eaton, of course, has little. Now the mist is out in the disclosure that Mrs. Eaton's sister, the wife of John Lewis Edwards of Washington, D. C., is giving the accused widow unlimited financial support. Nothing will be spared to aid Mrs. Eaton.

It is understood that Mrs. Edwards did not wish to appear personally in the court trial. But from her Washington home Mrs. Edwards has watched the case closely and has ordered that everything that Mrs. Eaton needs shall be secured for her.

Mrs. Eaton appeared bright and cheerful in the Plymouth courtroom today. She answered roll and returned to her seat and she looked happy and confident.

Neighbors on Stand.

The early witnesses today were Mrs. Charles M. Hill and Mrs. Katherine Mayo, neighbors of the Eatons in Agawam, and Charles E. Rice, a Rockland undertaker, Samuel W. Baker, an optician of Rockland, and Mrs. Abbie C. Cottrell, former housekeeper for the Eatons.

Mrs. Mayo was declared Mrs. Eaton in a conversation with her had accused the admiral of perverted ideas and practices. She said Mrs. Eaton had claimed the admiral had given her daughter, Jane, a "mess of soup, vinegar and pepper," and that he also ate it.

Baker testified that in a talk with the admiral a month before his death, the admiral told him he was planning a trip to the Panama Canal with Mrs. Eaton. He also testified that Mrs. Eaton on the day the admiral died had said:

"I feel the admiral had lived two or three

I shall call on him immediately after reaching New York, where I expect to go after visiting friends in this city for a few days."

Miss Stead discussed Mrs. Pankhurst thus:

"The fullest opportunity in our midst at this moment to find the United States in the Pankhurst case, has shown King Mob power to deal with women."

"I am not at all in sympathy with some of the more radical tactics of the militant suffragists in England. Mrs. Pankhurst is a wonderful woman and her leadership has resulted in the conversion of thousands of other women to the cause she espouses."

MISSIONARIES HEAR NOTED MEN

Rev. Dr. Kelley of Chicago Pleads for More Recruits for Gospel Army.

In his address today at the Catholic Missionary Congress in Symphony Hall, Archbishop Christie of Oregon said there are, according to reports, fifty million non-churchgoing people in America today. These people, he declared, are longing for the truth and will accept it eagerly if it is placed within their reach by missionary zeal.

The third day of the congress opened with a meeting of the Belgian and Holland Priests' Association, followed closely by the morning session of the congress, over which Archbishop Christie presided.

Speeches were made by the Very Rev. Francis C. Kelley, D. D., L. L. D., the Very Rev. W. H. Kotcham, the Very Rev. John Burke, and the Most Rev. John B. Pitaval.

At one o'clock an illustrated lecture by the Rev. Dr. McGinchey on foreign mission scenes, was scheduled for Horticultural Hall.

An hour later, the immigration session began in Symphony Hall, while the Women's Auxiliary of the Catholic Church Extension Society met in the other hall. Bishop P. J. Muldoon, of Rockland, Ill., presided.

The heads of the missionary societies will meet with the Bishops of the United States tonight at the Copley-Plaza at 7:30. Cardinal O'Connell will preside, and later will be greeted at a reception in the ballroom of the hotel to the delegates, both women and men, to the congress, held under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women. An address will be delivered by James J. Walsh, M. D., Ph. D., LL. D., Litt. D., of New York.

The second day of the congress came to a close last night with a reception tendered by Cardinal O'Connell to the visiting archbishops, bishops, monsignori, priests and laymen in the ballroom of the Copley Plaza.

Seven archbishops, two score of bishops, many monsignori, priests and visiting laymen were present, 4000 altogether. The reception started promptly at 8, continuing until 10 or shortly after. The Cardinal during the early part of the reception followed the custom he frequently adopts on an occasion of this kind and mingled among the visitors.

Mayor Fitzgerald addressed the visitors at length.

FR. KELLEY PLEADS FOR RECRUITS TO SPREAD GOSPEL

"The Home Mission Cause" found an able exponent in the Very Rev. Francis C. Kelley, D.D., LL. D., of Chicago, in the course of his address Rev. Dr. Kelley said:

"We can never solve our missionary problem in America till we settle upon some plan that will locate those being taught in that empty trust behind and relieve us from the necessity of sending our brothers to cover him, and the assurance of the help for which he is entitled by the fact that he has joined the ranks.

"The home missions are not richly dotted, a refinery. There is a crying need of justice on all the frontiers. They ask here to-day for the means with the present force or no none at all. Their noble pastor officers in warm woolens and in the modern army are disrobed even of uniform and sent scraps for parades

Defeat at the Start.

"Legions of rank wonderers are made in silks and fastened to a uniform that differs little from that of the ordinary colored man. An unmounted or naked army is defeated before it begins the fight.

"Amongst the necessary things for a successful army are the men, for an army numbers are concerned as are no need to be. Recruits do have and we should to us all feast to required but recruits we could have all sufficient consecrated could we take care of them in good and training schools. Vocations should be encouraged and every young man in recruiting stations and asked to show results. It is far more important to ask a parish what vocations it has from and studying for the priesthood than to ask what subscriptions have lately been added to the parish church.

"Every parish should have in the priesthood, since and working, at least double the number of the clergy serving its own altars. East, west, north and south number the cry for the scarcity of priests. But where is the surplus? To create such results there must be some organization to help. The Church Extension Society has tried the experiment of training good boys at the very beginning of their classical studies with but one pledge as a condition, namely that of they do become priests they will go out to poor or missionary dioceses selected for them. On this conditional promise and the good opinion of their pastor we have taken such boys and paid for their classical schooling and board. It is not early to announce the result of the experiment.

Need Training School.

"Some of these boys have already been ordained priests, some are to be ordained this year. At least one of them is here. It looks as if we could secure 50 per cent. for the priesthood. But suppose we lost 75 per cent. or 90 per cent., the balance would pay its souls, and who can say that the others are lost. An archbishop once said to me, 'If I had the means I would educate one hundred boys indefinitely amongst the Catholic laity for every priest I assisted into the sanctuary.' Of the boys among such students would be no loss, but a gain, and in a most unexpected way.

"But we need the training school—a missionary college and seminary. I can say by say that what now we have had amongst the students paid for in college by our society has been largely through encouragement. It is unfair to the boy who faces poverty of the missions to place him in the intimate contact of seminary and college life with the boy who knows that the pinch of poverty will never touch his life.

"There is no special military training necessary for the soldier of the House Guards differing from that of the soldier of the Dublin Rifles. All must be trained to unity and combat. Yet they are no schooled together, for the lure of one life would spoil the spirit of the other.

Only Reward is Sacrifice.

"The missionary's only compensation is in his sacrifice. He must be warned constantly that the multiplicity of them are his only riches. Men take for life the limits of their youth and young manhood, it is on his books that your missionary must rest, when age and third, hopelessness smokes at the door of his heart, and is seldom begone from a soul that has never matured the meaning of the Word.

"Arms are needed for the combat, but God supplies the best Himself—His saving Gospel. Yet the cavalryman must have his horse, or he is useless; the artillerymen must have his gun carriage, or he cannot use the missionary needs his chapel. The chapel is a rallying point—without it there can be no permanent Catholic life in any community.

"The experience of eight years has proven this. The officers of the Church Extension Society. The bishops who have seen results will gladly testify that it is so.

"What a pull those eight years of chapel building have been, full of trials, anxiety, heart-breaks, difficulties, criticisms, and God forgive us, some temptations to rest, but there are seven hundred consecrations—seven hundred little chapels every one built where no Catholic house of worship stood before, all in new territory, all on ground gained.

"Our with the worries and out with the thoughts of the trials of the past week. These seven hundred sentinels around the Army of Truth are watching with their Lord and Master in their hearts. Who watcheth over Israel,' and neither sleeps nor slumbers.

BISHOP MULDOON URGES IMMIGRANTS TO LIVE ON FARMS

A valuable and interesting feature of the afternoon session was the address of the Rt. Rev. P. J. Muldoon, D. D., bishop of Rockford, Ill., on "Immigration and Immigrants." In its cause the bishop said:

"There is no doubt that there is great danger to the immigrant in our large cities, but the report of the Immigration Commission shows that the housing conditions, the working conditions, and the general social conditions are far worse in the small and medium-sized cities, and therefore we should use every possible means to place the immigrant, when fitted, upon the land. Everyone, I suppose will admit, that the immigrants in general and especially those who have been farmers in the old country, would be far better off, if they could be induced to leave the city.

Favors Central Bureau.

A central bureau with exact and general statistics, could be of invaluable aid to every Catholic colonization endeavor in the United States. To all those who make a study of the immigration question the colonization of the immigrant appeals m frosceibly, but, alas, the colonizers are often seeking for the proper people, whilst the ready and willing immigrants are seeking in vain appropriate places for location. A central bureau would bring both these important factors together.

"Such a bureau could have official and close relationship with all the State organizations for distribution of land grants, such as is in existence in Massachusetts and elsewhere.

Speaking of the situation as it stands today Bishop Muldoon said:

Quotes Cleveland.

"At present a determined effort to exclude all immigrants who cannot pass the proposed literacy test is being made, and it would not strengthen the hands of those who are endeavoring to keep such a test out of the immigration laws to pass a resolution disapproving of such a bar to worthy immigration. The words of President Cleveland vetoing the bill in 1897 with a like provision, may be well worth rehearsing:

"The time is quite within recent memory when the same thing was said of immigrants who, with their descendants, are now numbered among our best citizens.

"It was after," he said, "to admit 100,000 immigrants, who, though unable to read and write, seek among us only a home and an opportunity to work, than to admit one of those unruly agitors who can not only read and write, but delights in arousing by inflammatory speech, those illiterates and peacefully inclined, to discontent."

SCHARTON TO TRY TO INDICT "DAKOTA DAN"

"Dakota Dan" Russell is to be prosecuted by attorneys for the Russell estate on a charge of perjury. This became known today immediately following the first positive news that Dakota Dan had lost his second big fight to prove he is the long lost son of the late Senator William Russell of Melrose.

Dakota Dan Russell's attorney, William R. Scharton, today said:

"I will demand that Dakota Dan be indicted for perjury if, as reported in the morning papers, the findings of the master declare that Fresno Dan is the real Daniel Blake Russell.

Eugene C. Upton, representing the estate, said:

"Any citizen can institute proceedings against Dakota Dan charging him with perjury, but District Attorney Higgins would have to pass on the charge.

It was said today that the master's report will find that Dakota Dan Russell is really Jim Rousseu, or Rusean, of Malone, New York.

The next step in the famous case will be the passing of the Supreme Court on the report of Master Gilbert A. A. Pevey, who heard the testimony in the second will trial. Next will come the attempt by the estate's lawyers to have "Dakota Dan" indicted as a result of his sworn testimony that he is the son of the late Senator Russell.

ACCUSATION OF WOMAN HALTS RITUAL TRIAL

KIEFF, Russia, Oct. 21.—A dramatic incident today caused a temporary halt in the "ritual murder" trial of Mendel Beilis and caused a scene of confusion in the court room.

Janitor Gaevsky, formerly employed in the house in which the Tcheberiak family lived, had been recalled to the stand by the defence to tell of conversations he overheard in the apartments of Vera Tcheberiak, the star witness.

The witness swore that he once overheard Vera say: "I must finish with Andrew Yushinsky, as boys are a hindrance."

Vera, her face convulsed with rage, jumped from her seat among the government's witnesses and rushed toward the witness box screaming, "You lie and you know it, you spy."

Guards Overpower Woman.

A guard seized the woman and the two struggled before the witness box amid a scene of uproar and confusion until other attendants overpowered the woman.

Yushinsky was the thirteen-year-old victim of the murder and was a playfellow of Vera's two children. Shortly after Andrew's body, pierced with forty-two stab wounds, had been found in a cave, Vera's children were mysteriously poisoned to death.

The inference drawn by many was that the woman feared that the children might have overheard conversation passed between her and some of her mysterious callers. The defence charges that Vera is a secretly paid agent of the Russian government to help carry out plans to harass the Jews of Kieff.

Unless the trial is suspended by the ministry of justice it will be a fortnight before a verdict is returned.

Report Convict Has Confessed.

A sensational story comes from Lodz that a convict there has confessed to the Yushinsky murder. This man, Beaguzin by name, is serving a twelve-year sentence imposed at Kiev.

He is reported to have declared to fellow-prisoners that he murdered Yushinsky with the aid of accomplices. All received payment for it. An inquiry has been ordered.

A great exodus of Jews from Southern and Southwestern Russia to Canada and before the trial began is revealed in the official statistics.

The Jewish emigration has increased threefold and is still growing, though usually the emigration season closes in October.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS

FOR DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR OR ITCHY SCALP—25-CENT DANDERINE

Girls! Girls! Save your hair! Make it grow luxuriant and beautiful.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and, if not overcome, it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected, and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If, and, if not overcome, it produces a eventually—why not now?

CASSIDY SPURS THE STATE HEALTH BOARD

Under date of October 14 Mr. Cassidy acquainted the State Board of Health of his willingness to serve as a witness in prosecutions against rotten egg dealers he exposed in the Sunday AMERICAN of October 12. October 10 Dr. Mark W. Richardson, secretary, referred to prosecutions brought by the board as showing the "energetic" way the board was dealing with these offenders against the law. Since then its press agent in a morning newspaper in a garbled report lands the activity of the board and misquotes Attorney-General Swift as ridiculing the new egg act.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A morning newspaper says, "The State Board of Health is still very busy with its campaign against egg dealers who are selling decomposed eggs and within a few days will prosecute another dozen for having in his possession eggs said by the health officers to be unfit for use as food."

It goes on to say many attorneys deem the new law backed by the AMERICAN is not as good as the old one and that health officers claim that an egg begins to decompose immediately after it is laid and that, therefore, strict interpretation of the law would prohibit the sale for food of all eggs of whatever age or character.

The same newspaper once before, either through willful distortion or sublime ignorance, misquoted Attorney-General Swift as ruling the new law bars fresh eggs from the State.

What the Attorney-General did say was that the act barred eggs which were unfit for food, and that ANY OTHER CONSTRUCTION WOULD RESULT IN AN ABSURDITY.

Just one more statement of the Health Board's position. Dr. Mark W. Richardson its secretary, in answer to a communication I sent him acquainting him with the AMERICAN'S exposure of dealers selling rotten eggs to Malden answers characteristically.

The State Board's Answer.

After citing convictions obtained in the lower courts against three of the four dealers I exposed, the letter says, "It appears, therefore, that the State Board of Health has already dealt energetically with all but one of the firms against whom you think we have EVIDENCE.

"Still very busy," says the newspaper. "Has already dealt energetically," says the secretary. If poisoning people by selling rotten eggs were not so gravely serious, these two excuses would be funny.

The cases which Dr. Richardson cites as showing the board's energy were brought last November. Fines of $25 and $50 were imposed last February. The cases were appealed and are now awaiting trial.

But what excuse does that offer the State Board of Health for not using the evidence gathered by me for the AMERICAN and bringing those criminal dealers to account?

Anyone who knows anything about the egg business, barring perhaps the State Board's inspectors, knows that rotten eggs are being sold daily to poison the people of Greater Boston, and have been sold daily since these possessions were brought.

The State Board's Position.

I showed this conclusively when I exposed the criminal practices of three Boston firms and one Everett dealer, all selling rotten eggs in Malden. And if in Malden, then everywhere along Greater Boston.

According to the State Board's position, if a man steals your watch, is tried and appeals, and then comes out on the appealing trial and steals your pocketbook, he ought not to be prosecuted.

Let me say right here, if the State Board of Health used only one-hundredth of the energy in effecting work it uses in manufacturing alibis Massachusetts would be getting purer food and the board would not now be indicted by the people on the charge of inefficiency.

In line with the board's attitude is the claim of health officers that an egg begins to decompose immediately after it is laid. This is one more instance of how really far behind modern scientific knowledge the State Board and its health officers are in regard to eggs.

The best scientific knowledge in the country now agrees that a fresh egg is sterile. And for the benefit of the health officers let me say a sterile egg is one that does not contain bacteria of the bacilla coloa type such as produce hen and hog cholera.

Even Sedgwick Learns.

For my authorities, see the New York Medical Journal of May 11, 1912, for an article by Dr. Randle C. Rosenberger of Philadelphia, Professor Charles H. La Wall of Philadelphia, Dr. Charles E. North of New York, a court expert, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley and many others.

Even Professor William T. Sedgwick of Technology has recently learned that a fresh egg is sterile and that the presence of bacteria expressed in millions indicates the advance of the egg along the road to putrefaction.

What's the use of the State Board of Health looking ceaselessly for alibis. It's not a question of to the worth of the case, but of the old law.

Bring the case under either law. The new law was based on the Pennsylvania law, which was strong enough to fine and send men to jail.

The board is dodging the issue. There's plenty of it to do. What is needed is an efficient State Board of Health that will enforce the law. And until the State Board really does something to stop the rotten egg business, I refuse to believe either that "it is still busy" or "has dealt energetically" with rotten egg dealers.

If the State Board dislikes criticism, let it act. The AMERICAN will be the first to give it due credit. But as long as it substitutes alibis for action, press agent publicity for the cackling that comes of efficient service, the AMERICAN will keep hammering away, educating the public to its inefficiency.

NEIGHBOR DECLARES MRS. EATON TOLD HER THAT ADMIRAL POISONED BABY THAT DIED

Mrs. Hilt Also Testified That Accused Woman Said Her Husband Needed a Keeper.

years ago; he would have gone to Europe."

Mrs. Hilt said Mrs. Eaton seemed her husband of using drugs and drinking heavily, but has said she found out Mrs. Patmore was to be arrested on him. Mrs. Hilt said Mrs. Eaton told her:

"I know the admiral poisoned the child; I will expose him."

"Needed Keeper," Said Mrs. Eaton.

The first witness today was Mrs. Chrissie M. Hilt. Her testimony continued yesterday. They are neighbors of the Eatons in Assinippi, living across the street from the house in which the baby of a year ago admiral had made to her home on the afternoon of the Friday day before his death.

She said the admiral was not in good health. He seemed nervous, and occasionally, she testified, he seemed to converse with the dead. She said:

"The admiral a keeper," witness said Mrs. Eaton had told her.

"He is using drugs and has also been drinking heavily," Mrs. Hilt said Mrs. Eaton told her.

Q.—How often did Mrs. Eaton tell you? A.—Every time we met, three times a year since the time I first knew her.

Q.—Do you remember the time when you saw the admiral? A.—Tuesday afternoon, March 4, about 4 o'clock.

Q.—Where? A.—At my home.

Q.—Did you converse with him? A.—Yes, he brought some magazines to us and asked if he could be of any help to us.

Q.—What was his appearance? A.—Natural and in good spirits.

Q.—How was his breath? A.—About his usual.

Q.—At different times when Mrs. Eaton called on you what did she have to say? A.—She said the Admiral was not exactly right. She said he took drugs and was often intoxicated.

Q.—How often did you see the Admiral? A.—Almost every day as he worked about on the farm.

Q.—Do you remember anything that Mrs. Eaton said about the admiral in relation to herself? A.—No, sir, I do not.

Q.—How long did Mrs. Eaton talk to you at these different times? A.—Sometimes when she was excited her conversation would last one hour. At other times not more than ten minutes.

Q.—What else did Mrs. Eaton say? A.—She said her husband needed an attendant.

Q.—What if anything did she say about poison? A.—She said she had told her mother that she did not realize the condition the admiral was in and that she might be poisoned by him.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said that she was probably mistaken, but she was firm in her belief.

Q.—Do you remember telling me yesterday afternoon that you asked Mrs. Eaton when she had told you this story why she would go away. Is it a fact that you did say this? A.—Yes, it is.

Q.—What did Mrs. Eaton say then? A.—She said nothing but went right on talking.

Q.—Did Mrs. Eaton say anything to you about the baby? A.—Yes, she said, "I know he poisoned the child."

Q.—Did you on March 8, the morning that the admiral died, see Mrs. Eaton? A.—I did.

Q.—Where? A.—She came over to my house about 7 o'clock.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said the admiral was dead.

Q.—What else did she say? A.—"I would like to have you come over to our house and help, if you will."

Q.—Did you go over? A.—I did. I hurried around and got there.

Q.—Any conversation during that time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Repeat it. A.—Mrs. Eaton said: "If the admiral had lived two or three years longer we would have gone to Europe."

Q.—Anything else? A.—She said that the admiral had been sick all night and couldn't retain anything on his stomach.

Cross-examination by Mr. Morse.

Q.—Mrs. Hilt, did you ever see anything of the admiral and Mrs. Eaton that was other than affection toward each other? A.—No; they were always affectionate and kind around the place.

Mrs. Katherine Magoon of Assinippi was the next witness. She owns a bright blue silk waist.

Q.—Do you live near the Eaton home? A.—Yes, right across from it.

Q.—How long have you lived in Assinippi? A.—Twelve years.

Q.—Do you recall when the Eatons came to live there? A.—Yes, about six years ago.

Q.—Did Mrs. Eaton ever call on you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember when? A.—Four years ago.

Come to Borrow Eggs.

Q.—What was the occasion on one visit? A.—She came to borrow some eggs.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with her at that time? A.—Not that I remember.

Q.—At any time did you have any conversation with her or she with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where was that conversation? A.—In my back yard.

Q.—How long a talk was it? A.—About half an hour.

Q.—Tell us, as nearly as you can, what she said to you? A.—She wanted that I should take June to board. I asked her the reason why. She told me that June was sick. I then said the admiral had asked a mess and given it to her. I asked her what the mess was. She said he had asked a mess of soup and the gist and pepper for June.

Mrs. Magoon testified shortly at this and some of the speculators subscribed.

The courtroom was then cleared, as was taken before the proceedings opened. It was the first pleasant day since the trial began.

Assistant District Attorney Katzmann: Tell us, Mrs. Magoon, what you said to Mrs. Eaton when she told you about the mixture? A.—I told her I didn't believe her.

Q.—Did she make any reply to that? A.—I don't remember that she did.

Q.—Did you take June to board? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know Mrs. Cullamore? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did she live? A.—About as far as from here to the water, the dwelling about an eighth of a mile.

Q.—How far from Mrs. Eaton's home? A.—About twenty minutes' walk.

Q.—Do you remember Mrs. Eaton saying anything to you about Mrs. Cullamore? A.—Yes. Mrs. Eaton and her self-importance winked at her husband. Mrs. Cullamore was in her house at the time and Admiral Eaton was in the backyard.

Q.—Admiral Eaton was in his backyard and Mrs. Cullamore was in her house with all that distance between? A.—Yes.

Had Talked with Admiral.

At this point Mrs. Magoon stated that Mrs. Eaton told her about his personal peculiarities and coupled him with perverted ideas and practices.

Q.—Did you ever talk with the admiral? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever notice anything about him to indicate that he was of unsound mind? A.—No.

Attorney William A. Morse asked Mrs. Magoon just one question.

Q.—Did you ever visit Mrs. Eaton's house? A.—No.

Attorney Morse: That's all.

Charles E. Rice of Rockland, a lumberman and undertaker, testified that he had known the Eatons since 1905 and that he visited the home as a tradesman to collect bills. Mrs. Eaton discussed her financial affairs with the witness.

Q.—What did she say? A.—She said that the admiral's financial affairs were involved when she came to Assinippi. She said that he had drank and gambled a great deal in Brookline and was heavily in debt.

Q.—What other conversation did you have with her? A.—I saw her in the Fall of 1909 in front of my store in Rockland. I left my store to go into the house and she was on the doorstep. She stopped me. She told me that the baby was not her baby. (Mrs. Eaton laughed.)

Q.—Do you remember anything about the Rockland Brotherhood? A.—Yes. I was at the Eaton home one day when the admiral told me that he often made addresses. I told him we would be glad to have him address the men's association at our church. The admiral said he would be glad to come. Mrs. Eaton spoke up and said that the admiral often spoke and that he was a very good speaker, but she said she did not allow him to go out and come home alone. I said we would be glad to arrange to send him home in a carriage.

Admiral Appeared Sane.

Q.—What did she say to that? A.—She said that would be all right.

Q.—Did you ever notice anything to indicate insanity about the admiral?

Attorney Morse objected, but the question was allowed.

A.—No.

Attorney Morse cross-examined Rice.

Q.—Do you remember Mrs. Eaton telling you when she mentioned that the baby was not hers that she was very anxious to have a son by the admiral? A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember that she said she thought the admiral ought to have a son, as he held such a high position in the navy, and that he ought to have a son to succeed him? A.—No.

Q.—When you saw the admiral and Mrs. Eaton together did they appear to be on good terms? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did they appear to have a high regard for each other? A.—Yes.

The next witness was Mrs. Abbie C. Cottrell.

Q.—How old are you?

In a voice that filled the courtroom as did none other since the trial began she answered almost sunny in its strength, Mrs. Cottrell answered:

"Seventy-five years."

Q.—Did you at any time live at the Eaton home and were you employed as housekeeper? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When was it? A.—From November 1, 1909, to February 1, 1910.

Q.—Was Mrs. Eaton there at that time? A.—She was not.

Q.—Where was she? A.—With June in Weymouth, I believe.

Q.—Who was living there at the house at that time? A.—Dorothy and the admiral.

Q.—What was the admiral's conduct while you were living in the house? A.—He was always gentlemanly.

Q.—Did you ever see him intoxicated? A.—Not at all, sir. I saw no signs of liquor in the house.

Q.—Did you see any sign of his mind being unsound? A.—No, sir. He was a most interesting man. I loved to sit and hear him talk of his experiences in the navy.

Q.—What was the next witness you called? A.—Edward W. Baker was the next witness. He is a Rockland optician.

Q.—How long have you been in business? A.—Since 1897.

Q.—Do you know the admiral? A.—Yes. I sold glasses to the admiral. Mrs. Eaton and other members of the family. I have known both Mr. and Mrs. Eaton for about three years.

Q.—Did Mrs. Eaton come to your place of business? A.—She did.

Wanted Help to Commit Eaton.

Q.—What were the reasons for her coming? A.—She said she had lost her glasses and wanted me to fit her to a new pair.

Q.—Did she say anything more? A.—When I took her into the examining room, she asked me if I did not think the admiral was crazy, and would I not help her to have him committed. She said that she was afraid that he would poison her.

Q.—How did she act? A.—Excited and nervous.

Q.—How did the admiral appear to you? A.—Always as a first-class gentleman.

Cross-examination by Mr. Morse.

Q.—Did Mrs. Eaton ever say anything to you about the admiral taking drugs? A.—Yes, she told me that he did.

Q.—Did she ever say to you that he had made a study of poison? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did she ever say to you that while he was in the navy and in foreign countries that he had experimented with poison? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did they appear happy and affectionate? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she tell you that the admiral was using liquor? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Then all she said was that he used drugs, is that it? A.—Yes, sir.

Attorney Morse—That's all.

Frank L. Booth of Rockland, driver of a bakery wagon, was the next witness. He said he had known the Eatons about three and one-half years, and on one occasion Mrs. Eaton told him that the admiral was trying to poison somebody; that he was taking some kind of drugs.

Agreed to Track Him.

Q.—Did she say whom he was trying to poison? A.—Yes, she said he was trying to poison her.

Q.—What else did she say? A.—She said that she thought that he kept the poison hidden in the attic.

Q.—What else did she say? A.—She said she scattered talcum powder on the stairs so that she could track him and find the poison.

Q.—Do you remember any conversation you ever had with Admiral Eaton? A.—Yes. One cold day I was there and he asked me if I didn't want a cup of coffee. I told him no, that I was going right home.

Q.—Did Mrs. Eaton later say anything regarding that incident? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did she say? A.—It's well you didn't drink it, for it was poisoned.

Q.—Do you remember anything else she said to you? A.—She didn't dare go to bed with him at night for fear that he would poison her before daybreak.

Q.—Did she ever say anything to you about Dorothy? A.—Yes. Dorothy was lame and sick at that time, and she said that she thought Dorothy would get well, but the admiral kept her doped so that she couldn't get well.

Q.—Were you present when the admiral fell in the kitchen one day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Relate the circumstances. A.—The admiral was talking in the kitchen when he suddenly fell backwards and struck his head on the stove. Mrs. Harrison was in the sitting room and came out and told me not to say anything about it to Mrs. Eaton. The admiral came to and thanked me for what I had done.

Cross-examination by Mr. Morse.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Eaton told you that she was afraid to eat the food in the house, didn't she? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Admiral Eaton generally ordered the food from you, didn't he? A.—Yes.

Q.—And Mrs. Eaton said to you that she thought the admiral was using drugs, didn't she? A.—Yes, and that he was hiding drugs about the house, too.

Smelled No Liquor on Him.

Q.—Now, when the admiral fell back on the stove, didn't he reel like a drunken man? A.—Why, he fell backwards and then tried to catch himself by pitching forward.

Q.—Didn't you smell liquor on him? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you think he had been drinking whiskey? A.—I didn't think about it.

Elizabeth A. Lambert testified that she went to work at the Eaton home one day every week for some time.

Q.—You saw the admiral and the other members of the family there? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you find the admiral? A.—Polite and very pleasant.

Q.—Did you ever see anything that would indicate that he was not of sound mind? A.—No.

Mrs. Grace R. Booth and Miss Maud Powers, the so-called "bake-shop twins" of Rockland, were the next witnesses. These are the young women with whom Mrs. Eaton accused the admiral of dirting when he made purchases at the bakery. Mrs. Booth was questioned first.

Q.—Do you remember Admiral Eaton and his wife coming to your place? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the admiral's conduct? A.—Very polite and gentlemanly.

Q.—Would he stop and talk and remain any time? A.—No, he was always in a hurry to get things and get out.

Mrs. Maud Powers, the other twin, testified to a conversation with Mrs. Eaton about a week before the admiral's death in which Mrs. Eaton asked witness if she could aid her in getting a girl. She said the admiral was getting childish.

In cross-examination witness denied that Mrs. Eaton had said anything to her as to the flirtatious tendencies of the admiral.

Didn't Want June in the House.

Frank H. Alger, publisher of the Rockland Standard, testified as to a visit to the Eaton home to carry the medical examiner's report on the death of the adopted baby. The admiral was there at the time and told witness that he didn't want June in the house.

Q.—What did the admiral say to you? A.—He told me there was absolutely no truth in the story of the child being poisoned.

Q.—Did he say anything more in regard to you about June? A.—I cannot use his language but he said he did not want her any more.

Q.—Did he say anything more in regard to his relations with June. A.—He said she did not mind very well.

Q.—Any reference to a vivid imagination? A.—Yes, he said she did have a vivid imagination and could imagine most anything.

Q.—Did you see defendant and June talking shortly before the admiral's death. A.—Yes, about ten days before.

Q.—Did you ever see anything about the admiral which would make you think he was of an unsound mind? A.—He had a very funny manner.

Q.—What way did he show this? A.—In ways in which he expressed himself on subjects which he talked about. I suppose that he had been in the navy so long that his manner was different from a landsman.

In cross-examination:

Q.—Did you ever receive a note from Admiral Eaton in his own handwriting, asking you to print that a baby had been born to his wife? A.—Yes.

Q.—What were the relations of the admiral and his wife? A.—Friendly.

Q.—Did you ever see Admiral Eaton drunk? A.—No, sir.

It is not known whether or not Mrs. June Keyes is to be called to the stand by the prosecution. She is a star witness, but District Attorney Barker refused to say whether she would be called. Today the District Attorney received word from Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Eaton's mother, thanking him for his courteous letter of inquiry and Dorothy.

Conflicting evidence has combined to make the case apparently more of a mystery than ever. Admissions for and against the accused widow by more than a dozen witnesses have served to perplex hundreds of close followers of the case.

It was stated today that Miss Annie Rooney, wanted as a witness in the case, would be unable to testify, owing to her illness at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Miss Rooney was the nurse whom Mrs. Eaton brought to the Assinippi home.

Miss Katherine Griffith, who was supplanted by Miss Rooney, testified that she was the Eaton housekeeper during May, 1912. She now lives in South Boston. She said Admiral Eaton and Dorothy were the only members of the family at home while she was there, but that Mrs. Eaton came back the day she left.

"Who came with Mrs. Eaton?" asked Mr. Katzmann, who examined this witness.

"Miss Rooney," said the witness. "She and Mrs. Eaton went right out in the barn—it was early in the morning—and I was getting breakfast. The admiral was upstairs."

"Was breakfast on time that morning?"

"Breakfast was on time, but Mrs. Eaton couldn't stop talking to come and get it."

The witness said that before she went Mrs. Eaton came up to her bedroom, insisted that Miss Rooney had made the admiral ill, and said, that the house keeper had taken all his money, because she was a crazy old maid. The mistress of the house had even insisted on opening the girl's valise and searching it.

"Did you see any signs of liquor or drugs on the Admiral while you were there?"

"No."

"What was the state of his health?"

"He was strong and well."

To Mr. Morse, cross-examining, the witness said the admiral engaged her in an employment agency in Boston.

"Wasn't the reason that Mrs. Eaton let you go that she wasn't satisfied with the way you had done the work?"

"She didn't say so."

Charles Hilt of Assinippi was sworn. He lives across the street from the Eatons. He said Mrs. Eaton had called at his house perhaps two or three times a day. He saw the admiral almost daily, but he never saw him when he appeared to have been using liquor or drugs.

"Did you ever see anything to indicate that he was of unsound mind?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever hear Mrs. Eaton speak of the admiral?"

"She was over to the house one day and said she had seen a doctor relative to getting attendance for the admiral. She said the doctor had told her if any body was insane she was."

Mr. Hilt said that on the Thursday before his death, Admiral Eaton came over to the house to see him some magazine and asked if he could help about doing the witness' chores. Mr. Hilt was ill at the time that day.

Cross-examined, Mr. Hilt said the conduct of the admiral and his wife toward each other was always kindly and affectionate, and he had seen them walking arm in arm about the place.

May End Prosecution Thursday.

By agreement between counsel, Mr. Katzmann put in evidence that Admiral Eaton and Mrs. Eaton were married in Boston July 25, 1906, and also the date of the death of the first Mrs. Eaton on February 6, 1906, of cerebral apoplexy.

Assistant District Attorney Fred G. Katzmann said today that the prosecution might rest its case Thursday.

Miss Annie Driscoll who has a restaurant in Rockland, testified she had called at the Eaton house; the first time, she thought, was when the baby was alive. She stayed in the house with Dorothy until May 1912. She told of meeting Mrs. Eaton, and said:

"I met her in the postoffice. She asked me to stay in the house a few weeks while she was in Washington. She said the admiral was a feeble old man and asked me to keep him from flirting with a woman across the way. She wanted me also to keep him from going to Rockland, where, she said, he would be flirting with the girls. She told me that he was insane and wanted me to see what I thought about it."

Mrs. Eaton said, according to the witness, that at a theatre in Boston the admiral had flirted so that she would go out with him again, and she added that she was afraid to leave June with him. She said he would flirt with any woman, young, old or middle-aged.

"I had a letter from Mrs. Eaton in Washington," said the witness, "asking me to come again about the woman across the way."

Wilfa Mrs. Eaton came back she asked Miss Driscoll about the flirting and whether she thought the Admiral insane. "I told her that about the neighbor it was true, but I said I did not think he was insane."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

ANGELA MORGAN DESCRIBES THE VARIOUS TYPES OF WOMEN AMONG SPECTATORS AT EATON TRIAL

By ANGELA MORGAN.

The lure of the Eaton drama was powerful enough to draw flocks of curious women, through wind and rain that drove at a terrific rate through the streets of old Plymouth, rattling the windows of the courtroom and startling everyone by its force. These eager examples of morbid curiosity came to listen to this most weirdly fascinating story.

Looking out on this gathering of women, who had flocked to the scene with all the fluttering anticipation one sees at a theatre or a moving picture exhibition, I picked out six distinct types that seemed to me to sum up the feelings of the whole.

First of all, the woman who was attracted by the romantic interest of the drama, by the tales of love and conflict and human suffering, the element of emotion, the heart element.

Second, the woman who was attracted by the scandal element—the spice, the gossip, the unsavory tales.

Third, the woman who is "study mad" for purposes of "general culture." She is a club woman, of a literary appeal. She sees in the Eaton drama material for lectures, books or plays that will enlighten the race for centuries to come.

Fourth, the woman who is morbid, eccentric in her very nature. She who finds no joy in the normal, wholesome affairs of life, but is attracted only by the abnormal. The words "poison" and "murder" are to her like music. Whenever she hears them uttered in the courtroom, her eyes bulge a little further and her neck strains breathlessly forward.

Fifth, the woman who has come just because her own life is so terrible a bore, so deadly and monotonous a routine, that the woman who feels that she will die if "something doesn't happen" to stir things up.

Heart-Starved Women There.

Sixth, the woman whose own emotions have been so thwarted and repressed that she welcomes anything that will make up the void. This is the heart-starved woman, old, middle aged or young, but over the age if the heart is starved, that woman is a type to seek the courtroom for the emotion her own life lacks.

Perhaps the first to attract me, on of all that motley array, was a fat plain featured woman from the country; a housewife; a farm dredge.

She sat leaning forward with chin on palm, her marble-blue eyes big and set with excitement. Here is a sketch of her:

Apple-cheeked, shiny of forehead, her hair was brushed straight back and knotted tightly at the back of her head. She was one of the most striking pictures I have ever seen of the hard working, dullminded, gasping farmer's wife; the woman of toil and of endless monotony.

Her hat was a pitiful attempt at decoration; her ample figure was arrayed in her "Sunday best" attire. Her hands, red from the dishwashings of thirty years or more, showed honestly rough and large against her face.

She had come because she was hungering for something to happen different from the dull, dead routine of her pitiless life. She had come because she was starving and thirsting for excitement. So great was her longing, that she was glad to sit through the tiresome technical medical testimony, on the chance of seeing something sensational turn up.

The next type I observed was a well-dressed, quiet, cultured looking young woman, apparently a teacher or an aspirant for literary honors. She sat with her head bent steadily forward, her eyes intent, yet not too eager, her note book ready for the jottings that she occasionally made.

Pining for Romance.

She had come, in the interest of "general culture." She had come as a student of human nature, human experience, human drama. She knew how to view the whole courtroom scene as an "interesting illustration from actual life." Her notes were carefully and deliberately made.

Next, the young girl aching and pining for romance; the country girl, whose quiet life on the farm offers so small a glimpse of the "great world beyond." To her, the whole Eaton trial is a wonderful play, the characters as they move back and forth upon the stage are to her as exciting as any that ever appeared before the footlights.

She wears a gay little "tam" or a jaunty picture hat with a daring flash of color. Her face is one continual hunker for romance.

When is June coming in? Oh, do you suppose they will ever call June to the stand?" she slabs, striving to keep up her courage through the detailed testimony as to the contents of Admiral Eaton's stomach.

June's coming appearance on the stand is the real nugget that draws the majority of the women. June, "disturbing element" June, the "apple of her mouth's eye." June, the central figure, as the prosecution alleges, the leading character in the drama, about whom the entire story revolves.

Next, the spinster, tall, gaunt, grim; her right hip set close to her right, spectacled face; her pepper-and-salt costume home - made-looking, dimply against her frame.

The Gossip There, Too.

I studied her well, seeing back of her seemingly unemotional face the keenest yearning of all. It is she who has the real hunger, the real yearning for romance. Even more poignant than the longing of the romantic girl is the longing that gnaws at the spinster's soul.

Color, emotion, love, human suffering, human passion—these are as lures to her famished life. She has come from surrounding grey and dirty as old Plymouth Rock itself; her life has been barren of real joy.

Here at the Eaton trial are all the elements her own experience lacks. Here are romance, excitement, mystery, even scandal. And by the way, we call it scandal when it concerns our neighbors, our contemporaries. When it concerns the dead and gone of past ages, it is historical study and good for our intellect.

Next, I observed a prosperous looking woman with an intellectual, animated face, well dressed, quiet of manner, undoubtedly a member of "our best families." She seemed to represent the progressive, thinking type, the woman interested in present day conditions of whatever nature. She seemed a student of life for life's sake.

The gossip! I saw her next and I knew her the moment I saw her. It was she whose ears pricked up instantly at the mention of "divorce," "the admiral's flirtations," "June's love affairs." She will come and come and come during after testifying, hoping for something to come out in testimony —something shocking, a rare morsel to roll under one's tongue.

HARRY THAW A MARVEL AT ANALYSIS, DECLARES HIS MOTHER

Believes Son's Unusual Intellectual Qualifications Will Be His Salvation.

field of philosophy, a subject in which I was more at home.

When Princeton University was arranging for its sesqui-Centennial in 1896, I sailed upon May. Thaw in reference to a fund which we were then seeking to raise, and she, at that time contributed ten thousand dollars to found the Thaw Fellowship in Astronomy.

In reference to Mrs. Thaw, it gives me unusual pleasure to state that for many years I have been in a most familiar and very close and silent work. I have known how deeply she has been interested in every good endeavor, and particularly how generously she has contributed to various educational and religious interests.

"We have always been particularly careful not to have the Thaw name appear in connection with philanthropic work and have never done so except in the Thaw Fellowship in Astronomy mentioned in the foregoing letter, and the Thaw Fellowship of the Peabody Museum of Harvard University, of which F. W. Putnam, honorary curator of the Peabody Museum of Harvard University, has written a letter to me.

Statement from Harvard.

When Mr. George Peabody made the gift of $150,000 to Harvard University, in 1866, for the foundation of a museum and professorship of American Archeology and Ethnology, he did not realize what a valuable and important researches he was thus starting, nor could he foresee the tendency of his foundation for the purpose.

The constantly increasing demands for carrying on the work of the Museum, for providing the means for the employment of salaries of those engaged in the work, both in the Museum and in the field, and the means with which to publish the results of long continued and important researches, have made it the most trying part of the duty of the curator, and of the immediate friends of the Museum, for carrying on and further developing the activities of the Museum. Fortunately friends have come forward who appreciate what the Museum stands for and they have given generously old.

Among the earliest of science who helped the Museum twenty years ago, and were the one who gave as a permanent foundation the largest sum the Museum had received at that time. No single gift of money from any individual at one time has exceeded yours until the present year. You were thus our first most liberal patron, and your example was most encouraging to us. Miss Fletcher, as the first recipient of the income from the fellowship, which was founded in memory of your deceased husband, was at the time of the foundation of the fellowship engaged in important archeological and scientific work among the Omaha Indians, as an assistant of the Museum. Her work was received by the trustees of the Peabody Museum with gratitude.

The Thaw Fellowship.

In his report to which reference was made by ex-Governor Winthrop Professor Putnam said in regard to the Thaw Fellowship:

Another most gratifying incident of the year is the recent gift of $50,000 for a fellowship fund by Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw of Pittsburgh, Penn. While this foundation is primarily due to her appreciation of the important labors of Miss Alice C. Fletcher among the Indians yet the museum would not have been selected as the medium for carrying out her generous intentions, nor would the gift have been made a perpetual fellowship, had not Mrs. Thaw been fully impressed of the importance of the work done under the direction of this museum.

It is all the more gratifying to us that the gift comes from a distant source.

The Rev. F. W. Kohler, director of the Passavant Memorial Homes for the care of epileptics, Rochester, Pa., says:

Every merciful work has its source in the heart of some sympathetic man or woman. For several years the Rev. W. A. Passavant, D. D., held a donation given him towards founding a home for epileptics. Before he could see his way clear to begin the work, death reaped the saintly man. Among those whom Dr. Passavant consulted was the active and liberal Mrs. William Thaw of Pittsburgh.

Only a few weeks after his death Mrs. Thaw realized that now was the opportune time to start a home for epileptics, and it should be a memorial to Dr. Passavant, whose praises were still on the lips of thousands.

Prompt to act, she at once prepared and sent out a subscription blank. The returns were prompt and liberal that Mrs. Thaw arranged for a meeting to form an organization. The meeting, however, appears, save in the fact that the attorney of the Thaw estate, Frank Semple, Esq., would receive the returned subscriptions. The most liberal subscription came from Mrs. Thaw. Her personal work in visiting the lowest property and interesting her own family and other well-to-do Pittsburghers in the new work of mercy amounted to far more than her own subscriptions.

What Homes Have Done.

On the 6th of June, 1895, just one year after the mortal remains of the venerable Rev. W. A. Passavant, D. D., were laid to rest, with solemn religious services, the new institution was launched forth into a world of affliction, to afford a quiet, soothing care, useful labor and other privileges to a most pitiable class of sufferers, for whom little or nothing had been done in our country.

Already have these homes sheltered one hundred and eighty-five "bound" ones within their cheerful and comfortable walls, and all of forded rest and relief to over-burdened parents and friends; and that not for a few days or weeks, but for years. The influence of these homes in arousing a public sentiment in behalf of the multitude of epileptics throughout the country did much to help and encourage the establishment of the great State institutions for epileptics.

Without the actual personal influence of Mrs. William Thaw, these homes would never have come into existence. Her personal interest has never grown weary. When affairs were somewhat unsettled, owing to the sudden death of Rev. W. A. Passavant, Jr., she reorganized the Woman's Board of Visitors with much personal work. Mrs. Thaw was the tenth person to pay her subscription. Her son, H. K. Thaw, three days later paid his. Mrs. Thaw continues to this day one of the homes' most liberal supporters, as are also her children.

And there never has been a call of need, but most prompt and liberal come their responses. This crowning institution, started and nourished by Mrs. Thaw in deed, in word and with pen, should be a great comfort and joy to her heart.

Recollections of Harry.

"A letter regarding Harry, written by the Rev. Sylvester Scovel, president emeritus of the University of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio, says in part:

My recollections of the boy—now Mr. Harry Thaw—during his stay at Wooster, are quite distinct, and for the greater part agreeable recollections.

Marked intelligence was the first and always strong impression made upon all who met him. This came not only from his home associations but from a more than usually educated taste in reading, joined to natural quickness of perception and a rather remarkable memory.

He was fond of animal life. A canary came with him from Pittsburgh, and he became easily interested in other domestic animals.

He had already made some progress in music, and it was understood that he would use the piano at our house for practice. He was accustomed occasionally to come, at least during the first part of his residence, to our home for a little assistance from my daughter, in preparation of lessons.

I had this opportunity to know that in general his preferences were for those things which a more than ordinarily intelligent boy of his age, from a more than ordinarily stimulating environment would find interesting.

"Few people have known that Helen Keller is numbered among my proteges. I have known Miss Keller ever since she was nine years old, have entertained her at my home and taken a deep personal interest in her and all that concerns her.

Has Helped Helen Keller.

"In a letter to the Hon. William A. Stone of Wrentham, Mass., Miss Keller says:

If acknowledgement is to be made of the noble public services of Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw, I think I am entitled to say a word. For many years Mrs. Thaw has helped to pay for my education, to make my life and my teacher's life comfortable while we were doing our work. I like to think that this is more than a personal gift. It is one that has been generous to my teacher and me because she believes that we can help others by what we pass our knowledge on to others. That is why I include her aid to us among public services, and that is why it is a pleasure and satisfaction to receive assistance from her.

Mrs. Thaw's interest in furthering the education and the researches of an astronomer, he did not, we may be sure, consider that he was giving money to an individual. We know that the thought in his mind must have been like this: I am concerned with problems in industry. This man is concerned with science, and has no time to spare in gaining money. Therefore we combine in the work. The result is neither for him nor for me, but for human advancement. It is the same spirit which has informed that part of Mrs. Thaw's aid which I can acknowledge in public.

Can't Acknowledge All.

The greater part—the unmeasurable kindness—is what a motherly woman bestows upon a younger woman, and is too intimate to be acknowledged, except to her. The memorable, tangible aid is like a little cousin-in-a-gentle-sense. The office is the public services of Mr. and Mrs. Thaw—the office of which they have been devoted administrators. I am the custodian of my little room, and I hope I am doing my duty as they have done theirs.

I was present at the dedication of the Eyre and Jay Fellowship which Mrs. Thaw founded. She made me feel then, and I still feel that we are co-workers, agents entrusted to use powers which are not ours, but which we are privileged to turn to good.

A letter from the Rev. Dr. Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, 5th avenue and 29th street, New York city, says:

I am not willing that you should complete your compilation of facts concerning the practical interest taken by Mrs. William Thaw in Christian education without a word as to the helping hand which she extended to my colleague, Dr. Stuart, St. Paul, Minn., in a time of bewildering and hopeless distress.

In 1890 the financial outlook for that institution was so unpromising that Dr. McCurdy felt called upon to resign its presidency and I, at that time pastor of Westminster Church in Minneapolis, was electing to fill the place without compensation until we should secure the wherewithal to engage a suitable man.

Just then I was called to my present pastorate in New York, and, when I left my associates in the directorate of the college, they were so submerged financially as to be almost in despair. A friend in need is a friend indeed. I give Mrs. Thaw credit for having stretched out an opportune hand, but then, which greatly helped to save Macalester College from an untimely end.

Saved Western College.

But that is not all. Soon after the hard times of '93, the college opened with an empty treasury, a decimated faculty and a few students who, as the record runs, "were too poor for attending a funeral." Much of the available property of the institution had been sold for taxes and there was no visible means of support. Should the college close its doors?

In this extremity Mrs. Thaw was again appealed to, and she responded most generously, giving the first twenty thousand dollars to do it. And afterward more and more—in all nearly $50,000.

Mrs. Thaw has done many splendid things, but none braver than when she took Macalaster College out of the sinking sand and planted it on a rock. The college is prospering now and doing fine work, but had it not been for Mrs. Thaw it would be a mere memory today.

"A letter from H. B. McAfee, secretary and treasurer of Peru, Indiana, Miami College, Mo., reads as follows:

Mr. William Thaw was the first man of large means to express any sympathy with Dr. McAfee and approve his educational plans.

Through all the struggles preceding and following the foundation of Park College Mrs. Thaw was heartily seconding Mr. Thaw's support of Dr. McAfee. After his death she continued that support, and when in 1890 Dr. McAfee died without a moment's warning, and his wife and sons faced the terrible duty of maintaining and developing the college, Mrs. Thaw was one of the first to come to our help.

She invited me to Pittsburgh, entertained me as her guest, planned going over the situation with her fully, I was convinced that her judgment was better than my own and I adopted the plan of action suggested by her. The outcome was complete success, early removal of the load of debt and establishment of confidence in the future of the college."

Only a Few of the Letters.

And these are only a few of the letters from all over the country which she read to me and what better evidence would one want of the unceasing energy with which Mrs. Thaw has sought wisely to distribute her fortune.

Her helping hand has been stretched to every corner of the world, and I believe that one might be able to find even in remote Africa some one or some cause which she has befriended.

When I had heard a few of the letters we drifted into conversation touching on varied subjects, when I happened to refer to the fact that this woman with her broad interest in humanity was actually overworking me.

I insisted upon turning the tables and begged her to tell me of some few instances in the life of her son that stood out most conspicuous on her memory.

As she sat there in her beautiful gown of black and bugle, a wonderfully sweet and tenderly reminiscent smile brightened her cheery face and she agreed that she would tell me "just one" and so she began:

"When Harry was about seventeen I took my five children and my niece to Europe. We were in Ireland. Before starting we had told the old nurse who had been in our family for years that we intended making a visit to Killarney and she had wished that we might see her sister who lived near there. Upon making inquiries we found that the parish in which the sister lived was so out of the way that we would be forced to give up seeing her.

But Harry was more persevering than the rest and declared that we might go one way and he would find her and then join us. He volunteered to start early in the morning of the day we were to leave and try to find her.

Harry Finds Nurse's Sister.

"Getting such directions as were possible at Killarney Inn, he started, and leaving the train at an out of the way station, he took a jaunting car and drove for miles to the postoffice to which letters from her sister were sent. The postmaster referred him to the parish priest, so he drove to the priest's house and together they went as far as the jaunting car could travel and then walked a mile or more to the humble cottage.

"After a friendly visit Harry left with the priest a sum of money to be used in putting a new roof on the cottage and providing other comforts. He then returned to the station, and rejoined us late that night at the Dublin Hotel.

"This shows quite as clearly as anything I can recall his ready solution of difficulties and his readiness to do a kindly act.

"Naturally he was delighted to return and tell the old nurse of her sister.

"Harry was always very particular about being home at Thanksgiving and until seven years ago never missed in all his life; and I surely hope this one may be celebrated there.

"But I was going on to tell you another little incident of his ever readiness in holding out a helping hand. In fact I'm afraid sometimes he has been too ready.

"He mustn't know I'm telling you these things because I'm sure he would object—are you going to see him before you go?"

I assured her that I was not and on the strength of that she told me one other interesting bit which helps to show up the real worth of the man's character.

"One Winter in Rome, his sister and I were out with him and the old Duchess Salviati asked Harry to bring us to see her as she was confined indoors with rheumatism and she wanted to relieve the mother and sister of one who had given so generously to her hospital for sick and crippled children from what we'd call the slums of Rome.

Her Visit to a Duchess.

"I recall well the visit to her palace and the succession of servants in red livery in every part of the long corridor which landed us in the large library where we found the Duchess and an English lady friend. Greeting us all most cordially she made Harry sit by her side while she should tell his mother how he had helped her. She afterward, apologetically said she would be unable to go with us to the hospital, but would ask Mrs. ——— to take us, as she wanted so much that we should visit there.

"We drove to the top of one of the seven hills surrounding Rome and there in an old monastery redoubled for the purpose, we found the interesting and well-equipped hospital. The little patients, many of them were then sitting up in their cots eating their suppers, and it was for the greatest delight that Harry saw them, and talked with them.

"I give you these two instances as throwing light upon a nature which has been so grossly misrepresented and consequently too often misunderstood.

"Do you hear any grudge against Jerome and the men who are back of him—have you any personal feeling toward them?" I asked her.

"I certainly have no illy-feeling for Jerome's actions between a narrow, bigoted nature, to express myself mildly, and I think that is all I need say on the matter.

"Have I any grudge against the sheriff who captured my son? Certainly not. He simply did his duty. He was notified to do it and I have more respect for him for having done as he was told. I eat at the same table with him three times a day."

"Have you our plans for your son when he is freed—any ambitions for him?"

"He will come to his home and work out his destiny as best he can. He is well able to plan his own life. We have nothing definite in mind except to live on and do as much as we can to make others —app as well as to be happy ourselves. I never plan far ahead.

In speaking of her having no ill-feeling for the sheriff, I remarked that she was much broader in her views than most women, to which she replied:

"When you have endured injustice for seven years you become resigned—as not resigned—but better able to endure it. The whole family feel the same, possibly not to the same degree as I, but to an unusual degree.

"Of what qualities am I most proud in my son? Well, I'm not any more proud of one child than another and I really couldn't tell about Harry's qualities. I am proud of many of them, but principle most of all of his rather unusual intellectual qualities and his ability to analyze conditions."

"Is it true that you direct much of the work in Mr. Thaw's behalf?" I questioned.

Harry His Own Master.

"No, indeed," she answered with a bright smile. "He is quite able to manage his own affairs. I never interfere. We talk over matters and I'm interested, always, but in no way do I interfere with the conduct of the case. I regard that as a matter for men's judgment."

I then asked Mrs. Thaw if she were not a suffragist?

"Decidedly not," she replied. "Are you?" and I echoed her answer. We then spoke of the reports regarding Mr. Pankhurst and her daughter, and Mrs. Thaw remarked:

"That simply illustrates the wasted energy which is conspicuous in leaders of this movement everywhere. I'm afraid Harry might think this better left unsaid also," and she smiled rather question ingly.

The Story of Jean Jacques in Love and in Business

By Sir Gilbert Parker

Author of "The Seats of the Mighty," "The Right of Way," "The Judgment House," etc.

Illustrated by André Castaigne

READ THIS SYNOPSIS

Jean Jacques did a treasonable thing—he married outside his parish of St. Hardouin; and his habitant neighbors never forgave him; they called his bride Jean Spanishe, though they never went further than that because Jean had inherited from his father, the Canadian countryside, a soldier, farmer, and money master who could make or break men. In all some authorities say he went on his Grand Tour to the land of his forefathers. He was lonely in Paris; was a stranger and unhappy; he spent money in the Basque country; but the real thing happened when he boarded his ship for home—when he would have seen Carmen first if she hadn't got ahead of him. She was Spanish, father, Sebastian Dolores, were fleeing from Spanish justice. Carmen herself, in spite of the volcanic strain of the Mascon, was just as good the right of love in her, was just as good as she ought to be, but she wanted to have her chance. So she decided to marry Jean Jacques. She was beautiful; what more could a man want! Just as she got him to the point of proposing the ship struck an iceberg. Then life and Mascon planned to run away; came the race for land; the lifeboats were so crowded that Jean Jacques had multitudes to kill him and then to swim. When his strength failed and go. Jean Jacques went home to forgive he was sinking, Carmen swam to him his wife; but she said: "Wait until to- and helped him to shore. He had not morrow!"

AMAZING LOVE STORY OF THAW AND EVELYN

CHAPTER L.

"In the contempt and anger of his lip"—"Twelfth Night."

When Harry Thaw gave out his first and famous statement denying the possibility of a lunacy commission being appointed to examine him and intimating that he was fully sane, the newspapers angered him by pointing out that when a man asserts that he is sane, it is apt to raise a very suspicion of his sanity.

Harry read the newspaper comments and decided that he ought to make another statement.

Harry was rapidly taking the legal bit between his own teeth. So he sent for the "Headquarters" reporters and addressed them thus:

"I am not insane and my lawyers have no intention of applying for a lunacy commission to determine my present mental condition.

"My physical and mental condition is good. I never was better in my life. I had to fight pretty hard with my lawyers to be permitted to make that statement the first one, but I felt that I wanted to make my position clear. I told them it would do much to help my peace of mind. I couldn't rest easy until I had given out that statement."

One of the reporters mentioned Harry's mother and her expected arrival from England in two or three days. Harry replied:

"I don't see why so much concern is attached to mother's return to this country. Anybody could have learned the reason for her trip by asking me or any other member of the family. I, with all the others, was anxious that mother should remain in Europe. She is suffering with rheumatism and went abroad to take a cure in Schilmack, Switzerland. All of us wished her to take the cure before returning home. Of course, I shall be glad to see her, but for her own sake I didn't help wishing she had remained in Europe."

Rumor of Illness.

There was a report that, because he had omitted his daily exercise in the jail yard, he was sick. Harry said:

The reason I was not out in the yard is simple enough. I spent the day, when not engaged with my lawyers, in reading and writing letters. It is true that I was fatigued, but not more that I have been frequently. As a matter of fact, while the prisoners were in the yard I exercised in the empty corridor, which I had to myself.

Harry wished another story corrected. This was a report that he was pennaless, [illegible] so that he was unable to "tip" a fellow-prisoner. He said:

It is true that I was "penniless" to this extent: I wanted to give a man a tip and I put my hand in my pocket. I had no silver and I told the man casually, "I haven't got a cent," meaning that I had no change.

The reporters made the most of Harry's interview, as a matter of course. All he said was "played up," to use a newspaper expression.

Judge Olcott was displeased at Harry's volubility. Here was the client of one of the biggest criminal law firms in the city telling the reporters about having to "fight pretty hard with my lawyers" and other ill-advised information of the same kind.

The reporters knew that Judge Olcott had protested against Harry's first interview. To have him make a second one, in apparent defiance of his counsel, was professionally galling to Judge Olcott and his colleagues.

Judge Olcott came to see Harry after his second interview appeared in the newspapers. There was a stormy session between the indignant lawyer and his intractable client. Harry was reported in the next day's newspapers to have said to the judge:

"I am the boss and I will not stand for an insanity defence."

Again Sought Own Way.

The publication of these statements of Thaw and of his arguments with his counsel interested the public vastly.

They showed the defendant in a new light—that of an extremely difficult client, one so self-willed that his lawyers could not handle him.

They revealed a peculiar turn of mind in Thaw—an apparent belief that he could interpret the laws of New York State to suit himself.

Harry had always wrought his own way on other people and had been distressingly successful so far. That he would be equally immune in a murder seemed to be his idea likewise—so the public began to view his attitude.

One of Jerome's men summed up the popular idea when he said:

Thaw seems to think he has simply broken a mirror in a barroom, and, having announced his willingness to pay for any damage done, he should be allowed to go unchecked in following his own sweet will.

* * * * *

While Harry was reveling in his sudden independence of thought and speech and his lawyers were wondering what sort of a proposition they really had for a client, Evelyn was having her troubles with constant persecution by morbid throngs.

Every time she was recognized in public Evelyn was stared at, followed, spoken to and even insulted by impudent persons who took her simply as an institution, not as a suffering girl.

After Harry's second statement to the reporters was over, Evelyn came in. When she started to leave the Tombs she found a mob waiting outside, like dogs at a badger hole. There were extra police on guard to escort her to her taxicab, but the policemen and their frail charge were nearly swept from their feet when the curious mob surged forward.

Evelyn Idol of Women.

Women acted worse—far worse, than men in struggling to get close to Evelyn. They seemed to have lost all sense of pity or even of self-respect, as they fairly fought to push through the throng. Women and girls suffered themselves to be squeezed and buffeted, merely to see Evelyn, in a manner which would have roused them to indignant protest if they had received the same handling in a trolley car rush.

While Evelyn was waiting for the police to shove back the mob she gasped and said:

This is the worst part of all. If I could only avoid that seemingly hard-hearted crowd of—"rubber-necks" do you call them?—coming down here, it would not be so bad. They seem to gloat over my misery —especially those women.

Evelyn was right. The women did "gloat" over her. They were utterly without mercy, so far as considering Evelyn's feelings went. One woman in the throng who forced her way to the girl's side, actually raised Evelyn's veil and peered into the girl's startled face as she would stare at a freak.

* * * * *

Saturday, October 14, brought the close of the third week after the shooting. Two events of importance in the case occurred that day.

One event was the arrival of the transatlantic liner Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, bearing Harry Thaw's mother, Mrs. William Thaw of Pittsburgh.

The other event was brought about by Harry himself. It was the logical outcome of his peevish discontent with his lawyers.

He simply wrote a letter to Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bisbrane, informing that distinguished legal firm that they were "fired."

(To Be Continued.)

HARRY'S MOTHER PROUD OF HIS INTELLECTUAL QUALITIES

"Of what qualities am I most proud in my son? Well, I'm not any more proud of one child than another and I really couldn't tell about Harry's qualities. I am proud of many of them, but perhaps most of all of his rather unusual intellectual qualities and his ability to analyze conditions.

"He is quite able to manage his own affairs. I never interfere. We talk over matters and I'm interested, always, but in no way do I interfere with the conduct of the case. I regard that as a matter for his judgment."—Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw's tribute to Harry's mental ability.

Here's a Cure For Sciatica

Painful Form of Rheumatism Quickly Overcome

Those sharp darting pains that characterize sciatic rheumatism should be treated in the blood. And by using S. S. S. you not only get relief but a cure.

S. S. S. has the peculiar action of sending through the intestines directly into the blood. In five minutes its influence is at work in every artery, vein, and tiny capillary. Every membrane, every organ of the body, every emunctory becomes in effect a filter to strain the blood of impurities. The stimulating properties of S. S. S. compel the skin, liver, bowels, kidneys and bladder to all work to the one end of casting out every irritating, every pain-inflicting atom of poison: it dislodges by irrigation all accumulations in the joints, causes acid accretions to dissolve, renders them neutral and scatters those peculiar formations in the nerve centers that cause such mystifying and often baffling rheumatic pains.

And, best of all, this remarkable remedy is welcome to the weakest stomach. If you have drugged yourself until your stomach is nearly paralyzed, you will be astonished to find that S. S. S. gives no sensation but goes right to work. This is because it is a pure vegetable infusion, is taken naturally into your blood just as pure air is inhaled naturally into your lungs.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store. S. S. S. is a standard remedy, recognized everywhere as the greatest blood antidote ever discovered. If yours is a peculiar case and you desire special information, write to The Swift Specific Co., 231 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

FURTHER PRISON REFORM IMPORTANT PUBLIC ISSUE, GOVERNOR FOSS DECLARES

In the Boston AMERICAN of Sunday and Monday, I outlined the main points in our transportation problems and the principal steps I propose for overcoming the existing railroad monopoly and giving Massachusetts an independent transportation system of its own.

But that is only one of the important public issues which we must demand and accomplish. Our court and prison methods equally call for immediate improvement. A good deal has been accomplished under my three administrations; some very important reforms are now on the statute books.

For example, last year over 10,000 persons were sent to jail in this State because they were too poor to pay fines. The law allowed the judge to send them to jail for this very reason—not for the offence they had committed.

That has been changed, though it took me three years of fighting against the machine politicians to reach this point.

Then again, we have never had any real system of parole until this year. It has been easy enough to get a man into jail for very small offences—when, if he had had money enough, he could have kept out. But it has been practically impossible to get even minor offenders, with good jail records, out on parole. When you remember that we have had practically no provision for the help of prisoners' destitute families, you will see the importance of a working parole system.

To hold a man in jail while his family starves and to allow him absolutely no chance to even work in jail for their benefit, is not the way to check crime! We now have a parole board and are working to build up our probation system as well.

Prison Industries.

But though these reforms are well started, the whole subject is hanging "in the air," so to speak. Let the machine politicians have a single year in control of the State government, and the entire system of reforms that I have started may be swept away.

Then there are prison industries. Do you realize that Massachusetts is still manufacturing articles of wearing apparel in our penal institutions that are sold on the open market at cheap prices?

Do you realize that our State institutions are buying hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of articles in the open markets which might be provided by industries conducted by the prisoners themselves, so that wages could be paid for prison labor and the money turned over to prisoners' families?

Why do the political machines oppose this reform? Why should they object to measures which will remove all prison products from the market and still furnish funds for destitute families?

The reason is simple. The contracts for supplying goods to the State institutions are among the most valuable political assets of the "practical politicians," the members of these political rings and machines which have been running Massachusetts! So, the welfare of destitute women and children has to give way to the system!

These politicians say that organized labor will not permit the growth of prison industries. This is a deliberate falsehood to cover up the real facts. Organized labor has time and again voted in favor of efficient prison industries, provided the products were not used in the open markets to cut down the prices of commodities made by free labor.

The real obstacle is the machine politician who benefits, either directly or through his friends, by the State contracts. If you doubt this, recall the practical impossibility of getting real, open competition in the supply of goods to our institutions.

"Work Brings Reform."

Do you see why I repudiate ALL political machines, whatever their party names? Think, for a moment, what a farce these prison industries are. The men who go to our prisons are very largely men with families. Last year we had over 9,000 married people in our jails and prisons. Most of them had earned at least some small wages. Some had been earning a good living. But on entering jail all their earning power stops. The State Prison has some industrial equipment; but the goods turned out last year were worth just $24 per year per inmate. Less than fifty cents a week. That was the best record made in any institution. Our county jails averaged less than half this sum per inmate per year.

The best way to reform a man is to give him work. The best way to make a man of him is to see that he has a family is to help him take care of that family, whether he is in jail or out.

"If you could see some of the pitiful letters that come to the Governor's office from the penniless families of our prisoners, asking why they should be made to suffer hunger and cold while the breadwinner is locked up—why they should be punished while he is fed, clothed and kept warm and protected—you would make a vow to change this whole jail and prison system. And you would never cast another vote for a machine politician until it was changed.

Subject of Probation.

Let us consider the subject of probation again. Everybody knows that probation should be extended to the young offender for his first offence if he shows any disposition to obey the law. We have legislation officers over the State to see that this is done. But do you realize that we still have as probation officers men who receive fees for work in connection with making commitments to jail? Men who profit by sending young men to jail are, in some instances, the very ones who are here exposed is not yet removed from Massachusetts. Will the machine politician interfere with the use of his friends in the court service? Will he stop this abuse?

Do you realize that last year there were 54,000 small sentences given by the lower courts in Massachusetts? Whether the man or woman were up on a charge of disorderly very largely upon the probation officer in most cases. Do you see the importance of taking all graft out of the probation system? Will the machine politician take it out?

Now consider these 54,000 small offenders again. Some went to jail. Some were fined. Those that could pay their fines did so and were released. Those that had no money went to jail anyhow.

But there is no standard of determining whether a given person shall be fined or sent to jail. Do you realize that in one court probation was extended to 80 per cent. of all the arrested persons; in another court only 16 per cent. received probation.

I maintain that for every case where a jail sentence was needlessly given, a blow was struck at the civilization of Massachusetts just as if a man were let off too easily and not punished at all for some grave offence.

"Shall Keep on Fighting."

In fact, the former evil is probably the worse of the two. That is what legal authorities preach, at least.

The trouble is not so much with the police court judge. He can only do the best his nature and temperament permit. But judges are all individuals, differing in their judgments, their mercy, their justice, exactly as other men vary.

We must not only get the best judges whom we can prevail upon to accept office, but we must work for a complete re-organization of our old parole and probation systems, so that a prisoner or a person under suspicion may be put upon his honor at the first possible moment and not kept locked up in illness if he is fit for either parole or probation. We must establish means for keeping more closely in touch with each individual who comes under the lan of the law, and work with him as one who needs to be helped quite as much as he needs to be punished (and perhaps more).

These are a few of the things I am fighting for. But I have had to fight every step against the massed opposition of machine politicians and political rings. I shall keep on fighting. My victory will be the people's victory.

(Signed) E. N. FOSS.

Lawson Pays $974 Express on Pony

Ships Saddle Mare West and Then Ships Her Home.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 21.—Tom Lawson doesn't care for expenses; he has plenty of 'em.

For example, he has just shipped from Portland to Boston a beautiful little saddle mare by express, the charge for the journey being $487. The mare was brought out here originally from the Lawson grange of thoroughbreds at "Dreamwold," the Lawson estate, just outside of Boston, so that the round trip for the exquisite little pure-blooded animal cost the millionaire a neat little sum of $974.

The mare is the property of Miss Lawson, the magnate's daughter, and she had it brought out here for her own personal use, and for the pleasure of her chum, Miss Jean Forsyth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Morrison of this city. The fare from here to Boston is $77.15.

Mayor Again to Veto Street Order

Mayor Fitzgerald announced today that he would veto the order appropriating $400,000 for street improvements and began at once to write his veto message. The Mayor insists that the money must be raised outside the debt limit. The Mayor announced also today that he would ask the Council now to take up the widening of Avery street and appropriate the required $1,000,000. "In the end," the Mayor announced, "this improvement, through betterments will cost Boston little more than $500,000.

Prof. Wyman and Wool Man Clash

Professor Bruce Wyman of Harvard and George W. Collier, representing the Maine Spinning Company, clashed today at a hearing on the wool freight tariff before Commissioner Prouty. Collier was questioned by Wyman as to his good faith in presenting his argument. He replied that "it was none of the professor's business to question his motives." The hearing was at the request of the Maine Spinning Company, for a reduction in the rates from Lawrence to Lewiston, Me. Professor Wyman represented the railroads.

Sues: Says Pullman Car Air Was Fatal

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 21.—Attorney E. K. Brooks, administrator of the estate of the late Dr. Eugene Chellis, today brought suit against the Pullman car company in the United States District Court for $20,000 damages. Brooks charges that Dr. Chellis's death was the result of improper ventilation of a Pullman car in which he came from Boston to Portland six months ago. Dr. Chellis died of meningitis.

Blame Rats for $3,000 Chelsea Fire

Fr. O'Doherty of Haverhill Dead

HAVERHILL, Oct. 21.—Rev. James O'Doherty, P. R. of St. James' Catholic Church, died early today after a long illness. He had suffered for two years with heart trouble, although his condition was not regarded as serious until he was stricken a month ago.

O'Riordan-Bahan.

Prominent among the October weddings was that today of Miss Blanche L. Bahan, niece of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Bahan of No. 1810 Beacon street, Brookline, to Michael S. O'Riordan, formerly of Charlestown and graduate of Harvard in the class of 1905. The ceremony was performed at St. Aidan's Church, Brookline, by the Rev. Dr. John Cronin, the pastor. The bride was attended by Mrs. James A. Phelan (Mabel McGinley) of Brookline as matron of honor.

EVELYN THAW ATTRACTS HOST TO THE SHUBERT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It is one thing to lay your talents before an audience that confidently expects to be amused to the full amount of the price of admission, but it is quite another story when your social record is not your talent is the inducement that leads men and women in a mad open the box office. All of which will doubtlessly be conceded by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who danced before two audiences of wide open, curious eyes at the Shubert yesterday.

It will at least be admitted that Mrs. Thaw had a prosperous opening, but the task of entertaining so many men and women who braved the wind and rain for no other apparent purpose than to gaze upon a woman with a past was something that might have wilted the courage of the most seasoned exemplifiers in the world of dramatic art. There have been easier jobs that the one Mrs. Thaw took upon her shoulders yesterday. That the young lady carried her burden of the performance with every mark of modesty was a point distinctly in her favor. There was nothing of the temperamental dancer about her—you could even find room in your mind for a lingering doubt that she took herself or her work seriously.

There were indications, also, that the audience held the same view, for it did not permit itself to be deeply moved in any direction during the performance. But Mrs. Thaw did have a sympathetic, if not boisterous, audience. That appeared to give her the benefit of the doubt, which is doubtless all that she expected.

As everybody knows, Mrs. Thaw is presented as a spectacle for curious eyes, and as such she will unquestionably fill out the week at the Shubert in banner style. But she does make a serious effort to give her audience something more than a glimpse at a woman made famous through the public prints.

St. James Theatre.

"A Night With the Sculptors," a posing novelty, was the head line feature of the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday.

Globe Theatre.

There was a wealth of good vaudeville in the new bill at the Globe Theatre yesterday. The program was headed by William Bence and company, in "A Chinaman's Dream." It was a lively sketch with an abundance of comedy. Another live wire feature was supplied by the Four Adders, jugglers from over the sea, who seemingly did impossible tricks.

Orpheum Theatre.

Ryan-Litchfield and company headed the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. They presented "Mag Haggerty's Father." There were a half dozen other features.

Waldron's Theatre.

The new show at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday was called "Society a la Carte." It was spectacular burlesque.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Mischief Makers," a lively burlesque organization, took command of things at the Old Howard yesterday and there was fun for everybody. Besides the burlesque show a number of especially engaged vaudeville features were presented.

Grand Opera House.

"The Merry Makers" lived up to the name at the Grand Opera House yesterday. It was high speed burlesque.

Gaiety Theatre.

"Oh, Oh, Josephine" was the somewhat exclamatory title of a spirited burlesque show that held forth to two big audiences at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. The entertainment was burlesque at its best, with many novelties that are not usually found in shows of its type.

Next Week's Bills.

The Henry Jewett Players will present "Let's Go A-Gardening" at the Plymouth.

"The Bluebird" will return to the Shubert for a week's visit.

Elsie Ferguson, in "The Strange Woman," will come to the Park Theatre.

"The Madrap Duchess" will be the attraction at the Colonial Theatre.

"Held by the Enemy" will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square Theatre.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

The big feature of the new show at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday was furnished by eight polar bears. There were new pictures.

Plays That Remain.

"Brought and Paid For" began its second week at the Majestic last evening. It is a play you can hardly afford to miss seeing.

* * *

George M. Cohan, in "Broadway Jones," entered upon his final week at the Colonial last evening. It is merry and energetic.

* * *

George Arliss and "Disraeli" will remain only this week at the Plymouth. But few plays have achieved equal success in Boston.

* * *

"The Conspiracy" remains at the Park for the week end. This effective play has proved a genuine thriller.

* * *

Julia Sanderson and "The Sunshine Girl" continue at the Hollis, where melody and mirth are keeping everybody in good spirits.

* * *

"Joseph and His Brethren" continue at the Boston. This is a Biblical drama for all classes of people.

* * *

"Ziegfeld's Follies," as colorful and dazzling as ever, is now on its final three weeks at the Tremont.

* * *

"Les Miserables," the motion picture version of Victor Hugo's great story, is still at Tremont Temple.

DAVID BISPHAM HEADS ALL STAR BILL AT KEITH'S

David Bispham, the noted operatic baritone, Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne in their world-famous comedy playlet, and seven other acts furnish one of the finest programs at Keith's this week ever offered vaudeville fans in Boston.

Mr. Bispham, who is ably assisted at the piano by Barry M. Gilbert, is in excellent voice. Last night he gave three groups of fine operatic gems, and also recited Kipling's "Danny Deever," as set to music by Damrosch. Preceding his recital, Mr. Bispham stated that all his offerings will be in English. "Some have said," he stated, "that the parts of these foreign songs lose part of their value when sung in English. But I feel it is better to lose a part than the whole as is the case when they are sung in the original tongue."

"One Night Only," the sequel to "Town Hall Tonight," was another gem offering by Cressy and Dayne, and the witty sallies of Mr. Cressy as "Hip" Flitters, were of the Cressy standard.

Frederick Ormonde, Al Roberts, J. Morrill Morrison, Robert Capron and Alfred Lunt interpreted creditably the parts to which they were assigned.

"Over Night" Proves an Amusing Comedy

"Over Night," which is being produced at the Castle Square Theatre this week, attracted a large audience on its opening night. Three acts of uninterrupted humor were enjoyed.

Philip Bartholomae's laugh producing farce was ably staged and presented by the Castle Square players. It deals with the adventures of two newly wed couples accompanying one pair of honeymooners up the Hudson river on a day steamer. From this the scene shifts to an inn in the Catskills.

The newly married couples in the pair are Donald Meek and Miss Mabel Colcord and William P. Carlton and Miss Doris Olsson. Mr. Meek made a hit with the audience in the part of Richard Kettle. He interpreted the part of a young man ever overstocked with brains and whose lack of mental power caused him to get into many delicate situations.

Miss Florence Shirley did well as Caroline Patschen, and received a large box quet of flowers from admirers in the audience at the close of the second act. Carney Christie was the right man for the part of Al Rivers, and Anne Fay stone as Mrs. S. Rutherford Cleveland helped to keep the fun going.

Magrane Condemns Lynn Harbor Plan

Heaviest Taxpayer Sees Only a "Land Scheme."

Lynn's plan for harbor development and sewage disposal is called a land scheme by P. H. Magrane, the Boston and Lynn merchant, who is the Hub City's heaviest individual taxpayer. Mr. Magrane said at a public hearing in Lynn City Hall that there are millions of feet of marsh land for manufacturing purposes; that there is no need of filling in the flats for that object and that all that is needed in disposing of sewage is to carry it into deep water, where it will not contaminate the flats and marshes.

Headliners Show at National This Week

"A Night at the Movies," a clever sketch making farce showing real life in motion picture theatres is the headliner at the National Theatre. It carries a laugh from the rise of the curtain to its fall.

All the other numbers are high-class. The Cyrenian Troubadours, with their peculiar classical music, won favor. Low Hart, with his humorous impersonations, is a big hit. Lewis and Chappin recited plenty of applause for their comedy work. Albert Lerner, the man who makes you laugh with his fingers, and Jerome and Lewis served acrobatics and other attractions. Grace Pomeroy, a dainty prima donna, charmed her audience.

STORM SWEEPS NATION, DOING GREAT DAMAGE

The tremendous wind rush swept the New England coast last night and today was Monumentally made of one of the greatest storms in the records of the national Weather Bureau. The storm, coming from and rain, is sweeping northeastward. In the West and South there were many deaths and 900 are reported in Maryland.

Today's reports from Atlantic coast cities and towns read like:

Providence: The material part of the damage caused the storm last night and today are not looking for rescue to do, even today.

BOSTON, LONDON—Reported here this year prevailed during the night. Much damage. Steamers Commonwealth and Arthur Cantin former report Anita forced to put to port. Wireless message has not yet come.

GLOUCESTER—A thirty-foot sloop yacht ashore at Magnolia; many pleasure boats anchored there dragged their anchors and the harbor at Annisquam was broken in the board underwater still protecting it.

A Chicago dispatch said:

Six lives were lost in a storm which raged over the Middle West today. George McGinnis and Thomas Hanson, sailors, were drowned in Kewaunee Lake, Wisconsin, when their yacht was overturned in a gale. A capsized launch was overturned a corresponding day at Ashland, Wis. A violent snowstorm, the worst at this season of the year in the history of the united southwest, swept Chicago. The sudden drop in temperature and the heavy snow caused great suffering and endangered many lives. Railroad traffic coming into Chicago were delayed several hours and traffic in the city was demoralized. Elevated trains and surface cars abandoned their schedules. All shipping on Lake Superior was suspended.

Eight vessels were overdue on Lake Superior ports today and it was feared they foundered in the gale which has raged for thirty-six hours in that region.

SCHOOLBOY RIDIRON TEAMS IN EAIY WEEK GAMES—NEWS O THE IMPORTANT COLLEGES

M'LEAN IS AT ODDS WITH HIS TEAMMATES

By SAM CRANE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—"Why, the Athletics' season got as much money as I did," said Larry McLean in anger over what he considers the "chump" way he was used by his fellow Giants in the division of the boss's share of the world's series money.

Larry was allowed only a paltry $500, and is as mad as a hornet. He thinks $1,000 is the least he should have received; but it seems that one-half of one full share was divided between him and Fromme.

It would seem that Larry has a just cause for his grievance, for he was a prime factor in the only game the Giants won during the series, and batted better than any other player on the team who took part in the series on regularity as he did. In fact, Larry McLean received more favorable mention than any other Giant player excepting Christy Mathewson.

There When Needed Most.

Larry did not play the entire season with the Giants, and therefore did not have as much to do with winning the National League championship as other players, but still he joined the team at exactly the time when his sturdy catching and long experience was most needed, and he filled the dangerous gap made by Chief Meyers enforced absence meritoriously and most ably and capably filled the regular catcher's shoes.

The team was in a decided slump, too, when Manager McGraw wisely decided to get Mclean, and the latter did much to put the boys back into their stride.

The report is that most of the players wanted to increase Larry's award to $1,000 by all chipping in, but that Chief Meyers refused to give his bit of $25 or thereabouts, and then all the rest decided that if all did not give their individual shares none of them would. That seems somewhat ungrateful, but still there are so many persons who have to be "staked" that the players doubtless felt that a halt must be called, and McLean happened to be the one on whom the blight fell.

McGraw Lets Players Divide.

McGraw always leaves it to his players to divide their world's series money as they choose and a vote of the players is always taken. They try to be as fair as possible, but mistakes will occasionally happen, as apparently with McLean.

What increased Larry's mote than anything else was that Josh Devaro is said to have shown a check around Harlem that he said was for $1,500, and that it was his share of the world's series money. Now, while one full share of the world's series coin was divided between Bridwell and Devlin when they were traded to the Boston club, still I do not think that Devore got any such big amount for this season's division. It does not look reasonable that he did. I imagine that Josh wanted to "flash" and probably exaggerated the size of the check.

It would seem as if it would be for the best interest of the players and the team work that in the future if the Giants play off for another world's championship McGraw be given charge of the division of the money. The hard feelings engendered by the players making the allotments are very liable to cause discontent and consequent dissension.

FAST RUNNERS TO REPRESENT THE CRIMSON

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

Harvard will be represented by one of the strongest cross-country teams in its history in the annual meet with Cornell on November 1. For the first time in a great many years Harvard conquered Cornell at its own game last Fall.

Practically the same team will oppose the Ithacans next month. In Boyd, MacClure, Boynton, Zamore, and De Gozaldi, the Crimson has a wonderful combination.

Cornell will have a fair team, as Jack Moakley, who has trained at that college for years, will muster up his full strength and if he has not the stars that he formerly had, he is a coach who is well able to develop them. Moakley will surely miss the finest champion that he ever brought out—John Paul Jones. In Jones, Cornell had a peerless leader who could be depended upon to win and this alone was a great asset.

Harvard will present a fine team under the leadership of Captain Boyd. The men have been training faithfully and Coach Sarubb, who is responsible for the form shown by the college across the Charles, has worked them harder than ever because he is determined to win not only every dual meet but also capture the big Intercollegiate championship.

It will be practically a trainers' battle, for Moakley's supremacy in this game was never questioned until the arrival of Sarubb at Cambridge. The Englishman has worked faithfully to develop an all around team and his efforts have met with great success, for in addition to the men mentioned, he has also turned out Southwick, Peckham and Eric Stone who are runners of note.

Athletes who have covered the new Belmont course at Waverley and the old course at Chestnut Hill claim that the former is much stiffer. The total distance is five and one-half miles.

STOVALL TO LEAD FEDERAL LEAGUE CLUB

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 21.—George Stovall, formerly manager of the St. Louis American League baseball club, has come to terms with the directors of the Kansas City club of the Federal League, to manage the local team next season.

Stovall announced that he would not sign his contract, however, until November 1, when Robert Hedges, president of the St. Louis club, has promised to give an answer on Stovall's request for an unconditional release.

It is understood Stovall's contract, which is for three years, calls for a salary of $7,000 a year and a substantial bonus for signing. Before playing with St. Louis, Stovall was with the Cleveland Americans.

Smith Favorite Over Ross in Arena Bout

Sensational White Heavyweight Champion Hopes to Knock Out Rugged Opponent Tonight.

By JACK CONWAY.

"GUNBOAT" SMITH, the best little "white hope" destroyer in captivity, will be in our midst this evening. Smith is scheduled to clash with Tony Ross in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A., and the tussle will probably be hard fought.

Smith has been made a top-heavy favorite. In the betting. It is believed that his punching ability will enable him to become a winner. Many of the gamblers, however, are wagering any real money on Smith's chances of scoring a dream wallop. What few bets have been made were at odds of 6 to 5, with Smith on the long end.

Boston "fans" are eager to see "Gunboat" in action. He is the best advertised white heavyweight in the world, and has made a fine record in his bouts inside of the hemp ropes.

As was stated in this column yesterday, Smith is a one punch fighter. He does not depend upon speed and science in order to win his ring contests. "I can beat any man whom I can hit," is the way Smith himself put it today.

"Gunboat's" famous right-hand punch usually brings home the bacon. He uses this blow to best advantage when his opponent is several feet away from him. He swings it wildly, but it lands with terrific force.

When Smith's opponent tries to avoid punishment by "covering up," the "Gunboat" directs punches to the back of the neck which hurt even more than smashes on the point of the jaw or in the pit of the stomach.

HOPES TO STOP ROSS.

SMITH is anxious to win from Ross in decisive style this evening if possible. He realizes that he will be in big demand by boxing promoters if he can score a sharp blow.

Billy Gibson, manager of Madison Square Garden, New York, wants Smith to clash with Carl Morris in the big city on November 10. Smith and Morris fought recently in Gotham, and Jim Buckley's protege won on a foul in five rounds. Morris believes he would be able to reverse the tables if another whirl were arranged.

Smith would also like to get a date with Sam Langford. He is willing to meet the "Tar Baby" in this city on November 11, but nothing definite has been done in regard to such a match, as Langford is on the Coast. The announcement of the Atlas Club has notified Smith's manager that he would rather accept the offer to box Morris in New York, as Langford will probably not return to Boston for several weeks.

ROSS RUGGED FIGHTER.

ROSS is in good condition for tonight's fight, and advances the information that he will spring a surprise and defeat Smith. Tony weighs 195 and so will outweigh Smith by fifteen pounds.

Ross is well known to New England ring lovers. He won from Charley Miller of California on a foul in three rounds at the Atlas Club last week, while he has fought hard battles with almost all of the leading heavyweights in the world. He has never drawn the color line, and has clashed with Johnson, Langford and Jeanette.

Ross knows more about the ring game than Smith, and is fairly fast. The "fans," however, believe that Smith's wallop will enable him to vanquish the rugged Italian glove wielder.

STRONG PRELIMINARY CARD.

A STRONG preliminary card has been arranged. Ray Syvia of New Bedford will battle Eddie Flynn of Lynn in the semi-final contest of eight rounds. Syvia is an aggressive young man, and will force Flynn to travel at a merry pace if he is to gain the decision.

There will be two six-round bouts. Dan McDonald will battle D. Cameron, while "Kid" McDonald will exchange punches with "Young" Clancy.

MURPHY FIGHTS TONIGHT.

EDDIE MURPHY, the pride of South Boston, will engage in a ten-round bout with Jimmy Duffy of Buffalo in St. Louis tonight. Murphy has been made a 10-to-8 favorite, and expects to prove too fast and elusive for Duffy.

After his "go" with Duffy Murphy will probably return East. There is a possibility that Murphy and Jack Britton will meet for the third time at the Atlas Club on November 11.

CHICK SEEKING BOUTS.

JOE CHICK, the hard-hitting Gloucester boxer may be signed to meet Frank Loughrey or "Kid" Alberts at the Marleville A. C., Rhode Island within a few weeks. Chick believes he would be able to conquer either of these men.

BROOKS STARTS TRAINING.

TERRY BROOKS has started training for his bout with Fred Yelle which will be staged in Webster on October 29. Brooks realizes that Yelle is on of the best lightweights in New England, but asserts that his punching ability will cause the downfall of the Taunton boy. The men have agreed to make 135 pounds at 8 o'clock on the night of the bout.

Speaker and McBride Join the White Sox

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 21.—Tris Speaker, star outfielder of the Boston Red Sox, and George McBride, shortstop of the Washington Senators, joined the White Sox world-girdling squad of baseball players here today. A game between the White Sox and the New York Giants was scheduled for this afternoon, but this morning the playing field was covered with snow.

Boxing Results

Tommy O'Toole Wins Easily.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 21.—Tommy O'Toole of Plymouth had no trouble in mastering Young O'Leary of New York in a ten-round bout at the Peerless A. C.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Fred Kibler of Newark, substituting for Al Mello of Brooklyn, outpointed Young Killian in a ten-round bout at Military A. C., Brooklyn.

Ah Chung Earns a Draw.

DOVER, N. H., Oct. 21.—Frank Ah Chung, the Chinese boxer of Lowell, Mass., and Kid Nash of Lynn, boxed six fast rounds before the Dover Social and Athletic Club, and the bout was declared a draw.

Griffith Outboxes Bresnahan.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 21.—Johnny Griffith of Akron outpointed Tommy Bresnahan of Canton, Ohio, in their twelve-round bout at Youngstown.

K. O. Mars Wins on Points.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21.—Knockout Mars, the Cincinnati featherweight, received the popular verdict on his bout with Leo Rosa of Memphis. Mars fought carefully and clearly won on points.

BROOKLINE HIGH PICKED TO WIN FROM LATIN

HOW THE TEAMS LINE UP.

| BROOKLINE HIGH. | BOSTON LATIN. |

| Hayes, f.b. | f.b., Martin |

Two schoolboys' games are on the card for today. Brookline High will play Latin High at Brookline and Everett will oppose Hyde Park at Hyde Park.

Everett should have an easy time with Hyde Park, judging from the way they have been playing this season.

Brookline is a strong favorite in the Latin game. The Purple and White will be represented by a very weak team. Three of its regulars are out with injuries. The team is still without the services of Captain McCarthy and this alone is a severe loss. Brookline will play its full strength.

Brookline, although defeated by Commerce 6 to 5, has done very well so far. Brookline defeated the strong Wellesley team 8 to 0, and Noble & Greenough 10 to 0. Brookline also held Mechanics to a 0 to 0 score. The team did well to defeat Wellesley as the latter eleven has beaten some of the strongest teams in the State, including Somerville and Medford.

Latin lost to Wellesley 13 to 0 last Saturday. If it wasn't for the fact that so many men have been out with injuries this year, Latin would have made a better showing. But the jinx seems to have followed the team all season. In the very first game Captain McCarthy was injured. Yet the team, although in such a condition, has held Groton and Medford to tie scores. As soon as the injured players get back the team ought to brace.

Ritchie and Cross Date Is Changed

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Manager Gibson of the Garden A. C. announced that the date of the battle between Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion of the world, and Leach Cross of this city had been changed to October 29, one week from tomorrow night. Cross asked to have the bout postponed for twenty-four hours because of a slight injury to his left hand and Ritchie promptly agreed.

Cross began training in dead earnest at Arverne, L. I. He is confident of defeating Ritchie on points, and after the contest he intends to leave for Los Angeles, where Promoter McCarey will pit him against Joe Rivers or Thanksgiving Day. If Rivers beats Cross he will ask Ritchie for a return match at Vernon.

Baker Heads Phillies; Dooin Again Manager

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—William F. Baker, former police commissioner of New York, has been elected president of the Philadelphia National League Baseball Club, succeeding the late William H. Locke.

The directors have decided to retain Charles Dooin as manager of the team, and a contract will be offered him at the meeting of the club in January. Fred T. Chandler of this city was elected vice-president and L. C. Ruch of New York was made a director.

Schoolboy Sport Notes

The rain kept all the schoolboy elevens indoors yesterday. These rainy days do not help to improve their condition. The various coaches are hoping for some good weather, so that they can try out some new formations and plays.

Spillane was the first man to carry the ball over Malden's goal line for a touchdown this year.

Malden High has a clever backfield in Jeffrey, Fitzpatrick and Norton. They have been playing consistently all season, ripping up their opponents' line and getting away some neat forward passes.

Captain Tom Thacher, son of Congressman Thacher, and Billy Gaston, son of Colonel Gaston, played great football for St. Mark's against the Middlesex school. Each scored a touchdown.

If Coach John O'Reilly had a few more men like Chester Brett in the backfield, he would not have to worry about the outcome of the game with Mechanics on Thanksgiving Day.

Bell and Captain Lelpsic were the stars for the Fayway school in the game against Mechanics. Both are good line plungers and defensive men.

"Mal" Logan, the fort of Boston Latin star, is one of the three varsity quarterbacks at Harvard. "Mal" was all-interscholastic quarter in his schoolboy days.

The two Robertson brothers, Jim and Arthur, are playing side by side on Somerville's line. Both men are big and fast. They make a good line combination.

Fraser, brother of "Ginger" Fraser, captain of Colby, is one of the aspirants for the backfield at Dorchester. He is young and new at the game, and has a great deal to learn before he will be able to equal his brother's reputation.

Somerville is showing improvement, judging from the game with Brockton High. The playing of Blanchi at quarter was a feature of the game.

Shepardson, a new comer at Somerville, should strengthen the team.

The Reed and Blue will be handicapped by an injury to Jim Pratt, whose brilliant showing in practice stamped him a very valuable man.

Commission Meet Held Up.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The meeting of the National Baseball Commission, which was to have been held here yesterday, was not called to order. President Lynch of the National League was not in town, and August Herrmann, chairman of the commission, left early for Cincinnati.

Brainerd, Minn., Honors Joe Bush

BRAINERD, Minn., Oct. 21.—Several thousand baseball enthusiasts greeted Leslie Bush of the Philadelphia Athletics upon his arrival home. As he stepped from the train Bush was seized and tossed aloft by his friends. Every whistle in town screamed a welcome and several factories and business houses closed to permit employes to attend the celebration, which included a monster parade.

The home-coming festivities were concluded with a dance in the evening.

Yankees to Report in South, March 1

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—While the deal for training quarters at Houston, Tex., has not been completed, the New York Yankees probably will report there on March 1 with the exception of the pitchers, who will be ordered to begin work at Hot Springs, Ark., a week earlier. Chance will follow the example of other major league teams by arranging a series of exhibition games on the way north, so that when the New Yorks arrive here they will be accustomed to uncertain weather. Chance said before he left for California that he intended to have his pitching staff in good condition for the championship race and that he expected great work from Caldwell, Schulz, Keating and Fisher at the outset.

Advises Cubans Not to Play Next Year

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Jose Conti, the well known Cuban baseball critic, says that he has advised four Cuban players who were members of the Long Branch team last Summer to refuse to play in this country next year. Conti says that the Long Branch club "sold" them out to the Boston Nationals last August for the purpose of covering them up. Conti, by the way, tried to induce John McGraw to sign Marsans when the latter was a star in Havana, but the Giants' leader declined. Tris Speaker, a recent signee of the Reds, also recommended Acosta to Griffith and predicts that the youngster will develop into a greater outfielder and hitter than Marsans.

Play Ball in Snow.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 21.—The New York Giants defeated the Chicago White Sox yesterday, 6 to 4. Snow was falling while the contest was being played.

McGraw Signs Five Recruits for Giants

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Promising Muggsy McGraw, manager of the Giants, who is already looking forward to the National League struggle in 1914 has secured five recruits who are said to offer more than usual promise. It was said today by an official of the New York Club that McGraw expects a majority of the youngsters to make a name for themselves in fast company next year and if it comes to another world series battle McGraw hopes for the best.

The following compose the quintet: Elmer Johnson, catcher, secured by draft from the Omaha club, said to be worth $6,000 of any club's money; R. F. Dwyer, pitcher, secured from Decatur, Ill., club; William Ritter, pitcher, played last year with the Wilmington, Del., club; Ed. Harriman, outfielder, from Newburgh, N. Y.; Howard Merritt, outfielder, from Knoxville, Tenn.

Rickey to Manage Browns Ten Years

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 21.—Two years ago Robert Lee Hedges tried hard to sell the St. Louis Borwns. He wanted $400,000 for the franchise, plant and team, but the highest bid did not amount to half the stipulated price. Now Hedges declares that he will remain owner of the Browns for the next ten years and that Branch Rickey will manage the team for that length of time. In fact Hedges declares that he has signed Rickey to a ten years' contract. It remains to be seen how the Hedges plan succeeds. Rickey has had no managerial experience.

Federals Look for Land Near New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—It was rumored today that embassies of the Federal League had been looking over available land in Long Island City, near the entrance to the Steinway tunnel; also that they had looked at plots of ground not far from the Sunnyside yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad, within a few minutes walk of the Queensboro Bridge terminal. It was said that the Federals had tried to enlist the financial support of several real estate concerns on Long Island. Whether they met with encouragement or not it could not be learned. According to leaders of the outlaw movement, interesting developments can be expected some time in November.

Penn State Game Test for Harvard Defence

Squad Gets Back to Hard Work Again This Afternoon After a Day of Rest

By SYDE LYNES.

HARVARD gets back to hard work on the gridiron today after an easy time romping out in the baseball cage to keep away from the rain, and for the next two weeks in the stress scrimmages which will be held each week every stratagem will be used to developing a smoother machine for the big game with the Red.

The Penn state struggle now that Dartmouth is out of the running, has risen to second to that with Cornell and after the hoary reading de at past 2 and to Harvard at Princeton two years ago, the Crimson is going to leave no stone unturned to move its leader in this matter on the Jersey shore. Penn State and Cornell next two teams to play after Dartmouth, have no particular terrors for Harvard, but they will undoubtedly need all the practice possible to aid the coaches in shaping up the Crimson attack and putting a little more fire in the attack.

SIGNAL WORK AND SCRIMMAGES

UNLESS it was necessity to get the Ark out on soldiers Field, the team was expected to have the team running through signals for a few times, and then all at the throttle for a good hard scrimmage. Hedges and Trumbull will be used in the scrimmage for the big game with the Red.

BLACKBOARD TALKS

THE work in the cage was fairly hard, although there was no scrimmage. Several new formations were passed out to the men in the blackboard talk held prior to the work outside, and the coaches spent a long while drilling the men in the proper moves in these new plays.

Freedley has the first call at quarter, and after the manner in which he directed the Tech game Hoy Crimson and all seems to hang on the pep and headwork shown somewhat very remarkable. Freedley, as we have already said, still had a tendency to heed too much minor signals too frequently, and he needs a good deal of the head work which Tech will not stand for. He did not make a fumble to amount to anything, although he was responsible for the second fumble of the game. Coolidge is being rested a bit, and Hardwick, who was given a rest yesterday will be back in action this afternoon. Pedrick is still nursing along the ankle, but is not keeping him out of the game or away from the opportunity to show some of the stuff which is still in him.

LINE LACKS COHESION

WHILE the scrub is showing a fair defensive attack, especially the line does not always move forward as a unit at once. It lacks cohesion. When the play starts forward in front of her it opens up a great deal too much, and holes cannot be opened up, or the defence cleared away. This is a point which the line coaches must clear away before the Princeton game, for the Tigers are said to be regular rocks of Gibraltar when they face Harvard on their own field.

DEFENCE STILL WEAK

THE Crimson defence is also extremely weak at times, at present state of development and the line as a whole is not working together with the result that every play in a while an opposing back breaks through the line for a big gain. This is a thing that has prevented danger on the part of opponents from scoring a touchdown and will be one of the secondary points of attack for the Red and Crimson.

PLAN SCHEME OF ATTACK

IN addition to the scrimmage on the Crimson field this afternoon the coaches will put in the rest of the time in planning out a scheme of attack that will get the most out of the versatile backfield the Crimson is so fortunate in possessing. With three [illegible] the coaches will have no trouble in working out a system of attack that will be very hard to solve, and the Crimson will be very fortunate if [illegible] the coolest of plays.

Green Coaches Plan to Develop Good Subs

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 21.—Dartmouth's next football practice following the Williams game was light, taking the place in its game, as the goal was a week off and. All the men reported for practice with the exception of Ambrose, Murdock, Tuck and Dunbar. Ambrose will not be able to play again this season, because of a strained tendon. The other three men will be in trim for Saturday's game with the Tigers.

The practice consisted of a light signal drill, with the efforts of the backfield given [illegible]. This was followed by a long [illegible] practice, and a twenty minute [illegible] defense drill against the Princeton formation.

Professor Alessandro Malladra of the Vesuvius Observatory descended into the crater on September 9, and reached a depth of about 370 metres (about 1,212 feet), a record where the exploration of active volcanoes is concerned, and attained the edge of a "mouth" which opened in July last, and is the first new "mouth" known to have been formed for seven years. Accompanying the daring pioneer were Professor Max Stortz and M. Paul Jacobi.

Household Hints

If a little saltpetre is sprinkled over the dew occasionally, it will keep the blue free from soot.

When washing oilcloth a tablespoonful of painters' size added to a pail of water will give it a glossy surface and make it wear much better than when washed in the ordinary way.

After washing cut glass articles for the first time, put them in a pan of cold water with a handful of bran and boil for an hour. The bran will absorb the grease and dirt, and the glass will be found quite clean.

Potatoes are more nutritious if boiled in their skins. After peeling a potato it can be sliced before baking to save time.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

THAT was too close to be pleasant, and Philip was glad to hear from Mr. Bert that the solicitors, after [illegible] to ask for some [illegible] Mr. Anson, were giving [illegible] to a satisfactory [illegible]

"What did you tell them?" said Philip.

"I said that you suppressed me as the end of young gentleman who would pay well for services given unsparingly."

"Did that satisfy them?"

"Perfectly. Such clients do not abound in these hard times."

Three hours later a letter came for Philip Anson, Esq., by hand. It was from the solicitors, and read:

"We are in receipt of your favor of [illegible] instructions. Although Mr. [illegible] days ago on which it is difficult to do business we lost no time in inspecting the premises in the Mews, Park road, mentioned by you. We found that the mews stand approximately on an area of three thousand two hundred superficial feet, while the shop fronting on Park road [illegible] feet with a depth of eighty feet, with a height of thirty or forty-three feet. The owner of these premises is a resident in the neighborhood, and he will accept four hundred and fifty pounds for the freehold.

We are fortunate in finding the managing director of the Sheriff and Harris Coal Company, Ltd., at his office. Although the company requires the mews for the purpose of a depot, they are not unwilling to sell, with a stipulation that the premises shall not be used by any competing company during a period of twenty years from the date of transfer. We stated that the site was required for a philanthropic purpose, but the latter stipulation is insisted on. The price asked is two thousand two hundred pounds, which we consider excessive, there being a very inadequate approach. Moreover, we wish to point out that [illegible] shop does not adjoin the mews, and it would be necessary to purchase two other houses to make the entire property a complete one.

However, adhering to the letter of your instructions, we have pleasure in informing you that the two properties can be acquired with very little delay, for two thousand six hundred and fifty pounds. The legal and other charges will not exceed one hundred and fifty pounds. We trust, etc."

Philip immediately wrote:

"I am much obliged by your promptitude in the matter of Johnson's Mews and the shop. I inclose [illegible] herewith for two thousand eight hundred pounds. The purchase of the other houses can stand over for a few days.

"Kindly see that [illegible] are duly executed by special messenger, and in a few minutes he held in his right hand a receipt for the money.

A second envelope [illegible] from Mr. Abingdon.

"Can you see your after six at my house?"

Then Philip enjoyed his first real breathing space during hours of daylight. He went by train to the cemetery in which his mother was buried, carrying with him a beautiful wreath. It was a remarkable fact that it was the only wreath he had paid for during the days which he had passed in London, but he felt sure that the dear dead would have approved of his action. Following her death he never lost the delusion that her spirit abided with him in the poor dwelling they called "home."

Below, the narrow resting place beneath the green turf in no way appealed to him. But now, that a success of extraordinary character had rewarded the labors of his mind, he recalled that she was really dead and not [illegible] that what he revered as her spirit was in truth a fragrant memory, that he would be nearest to her mortal remains when standing in the remote corner of the burial ground allotted to the poorest of the poor, those removed by one degree from pauperism and a parish grave.

HIS MOTHER'S GRAVE

It happened, by mere chance, that since Mrs. Anson's funeral no one had been interred on one side of the small space purchased for her. There were [illegible] plots here and a surprised official told Philip there would be no difficulty in acquiring these for the purpose of erecting a suitable monument.

The boy filled in the necessary forms there and then. It was some consolation to know that he could perpetuate her memory in this way, though he had formulated another project which should keep her name revered through the ages. On the site of Johnson's Mews should arise the Mary Anson Home for Deaf Mute Boys. He would build a place where those who were willing to work and learn would be given a chance, and not driven, starving and desperate, to pick up an existence in the gutter.

He was too young to devise all the details of such a splendid institution, but he had got the idea and was [illegible] upon the object. He would have the practical part of the undertaking to other heads.

But the essential thing was that deserving men not unlike himself should learn to speak and converse in the language of Mary Anson. Provided that were [illegible] he knew the work would be successful.

Soon after leaving the cemetery Philip came face to face with Bradley, the policeman who was in plain clothes and walking with a lady, obviously Mrs. Bradley, judging by the maternity manner in which she steered a perambulator containing a chubby infant.

"Well, I'm blowed!" cried the police man, "who would have thought of meeting you? I looked in at the mews last night, but you had gone. Someone is looking after you pretty well, eh?"

He cast a patronizing eye over Philip's garments, which were, of course, considerably smarter in appearance than those in which the constable had seen him on Thursday evening.

"Yes," said Philip, "I am in good hands now."

"They haven't given you a watch?" This anxiously.

"No, I am watchless."

"That's right. You'll have one soon. The inspector has your address. By the way, he wants to know your Christian name."

"Philip."

"Thanks, I won't forget."

Philip raised his hat and took the quickest route westward. He did not count on being recognized so early.

Mr. Abingdon received him with some degree of reserve. The magistrate could not understand the receipt of a letter bearing the address of the Red Bull Hotel, a place which he had never entertained at since occasionally of one of his wealthy friends, but which was far removed from the limit imposed on the pocket of any man whose reserves depended on the exercise of an ordinary profession.

But Philip still figured in [illegible] as a rugged youth. Not even the skilled police magistrate could believe that any of the actual owner of diamonds of [illegible] worth of portable property. His [illegible] appearance soon [illegible] his former [illegible] Cursory inquiries soon yielded to pa[illegible] office banishment when Philip began to relate his story. Lucidly from beginning to end, neither exaggerating nor suppressing any salient detail save the actual locality where his astounding adventures found their centre and genesis.

TELLING HIS STORY

Mr. Abingdon did not doubt for one moment that the boy was telling the truth. The romance of his narrative was his personal [illegible]

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and in love with a young lady two years my senior. She feels reserves my love, but I am undecided as to whether I should continue keeping company with her. I told her that I could not get married for five years, as I am not financially equipped.

Do you think it proper for me to keep her waiting, as she fears our love will grow cold at the expiration of five years? KARL.

OWING to the more delicate nature of you long waits are manifestly unfair to the women, and her fears are proper, as she knows it. It also proves that she is not quite sure of her own good friends, but gives her time to prove freedom may bring me.

I was nervous, had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world.

"After I had tried most every female remedy first, without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. ## Beauty

The Charm of a Musical Voice and How to Attain It

MISS DESMOND IN TWO POSES

By MAUDE MILLER

DO you know that there is something within the reach of every girl that will make her positively alluring? This may be a rather bold statement of facts, but it is true, nevertheless. And it is no difficult, prosy task, either, that one can undertake for an experiment, and that will turn out to be something entirely different in the result. It is something that is pleasant to do, actually interesting.

And now you are all attention, aren't you? And you'd like to know what it is. Well Miss Mae Desmond, the actress, says that the secret of charm and beauty lies in the voice. And that it isn't a very hard matter either, for everyone to have a beautiful voice. Yes, that is the nice part of it, the work is almost as interesting as the result.

"You see," said Miss Desmond, in her soft contralto, "playing stock means a very deep insight into the characters of different people. Each different play means a different character and I try to show my interpretation of each character with my voice. Long ago, when I was a little girl, I had a desire to know just what could be done with the voice. I used to read aloud by the hour.

"I hunted up books on elocution, and practised different expressions, love, anger, sorrow, sympathy, satisfaction and the like. And I found that I could do almost anything I liked with my voice. I tried to read poetry and grew to love it, but it is the most difficult thing in the world to read it expressively. And now I still do all my parts aloud; it helps me to know and love each character, and it helps me with my speaking voice. And the speaking part is what I want to enlarge upon.

THE HIGH PITCH

"I think it is a generally understood thing that people of today have harsh, high-pitched voices. There is no necessity at all for this, because a soft, low-pitched voice is the most attractive thing in the world and can be acquired with very little trouble. To find out the trouble with your voice read a few stanzas of poetry out loud. You will very soon discover what is wrong, and then it is a simple matter to correct the faults. It is possible that you may have to pitch your voice lower. This requires practice. A simple tone exercise, running up and down the keys of a piano at the same time, helps a great deal, and remember to draw up your tones as you do your long breaths when you take breathing exercise.

"Breathing exercises are splendid: take long deep breaths—twenty or thirty of them at a time—and speak your sentences slowly, with a short wait between each word. This will give you confidence and a fuller volume in a very short time.

"The next thing in importance is pronunciation. As Hamlet says to the players, pronounce your words 'trippingly on the tongue.' This requires no special practice, simply the mending of a slovenly habit. It is just as unattractive to be slovenly with one's speech as it is to be slovenly in appearance.

GOOD FUN

"Then when you have mastered these two great principles you can begin to shade your voice. This is fun, for the best way to shade is to read poetry or some good stirring prose. Cry out with the wail of the forest primeval, or the accents wild and disconsolate of the deep voiced neighboring ocean. Or play the passionate lover in 'Come into the Garden, Maud.' Soon you will have a definite, characteristic voice of your own, for your individuality will begin to assert itself.

"I hope I have helped you to understand to some extent what my voice means to me, and what a voice should mean to everyone," continued the loveliest voice I had ever heard. "I like my voice best of anything about me and I'm sure everyone else does."

I doubted this very much, for Miss Desmond is lovely enough without the added attraction of her voice. But who could have so lovely a thing as a charming voice within one's reach and not try for it? Particularly when it has been styled by one who knows, the most wonderful possession in the world.

The Manicure Lady

"THEY'VE been getting after the plays lately, haven't they?" said the Head Barber, throwing aside the morning paper.

"I should say they have," said the Manicure Lady, "and as the old gent was saying up home last night, it is about time that something should be did. I ain't been to see none of the daring ones, but from what I hear some of them is pretty risky. I wouldn't go to no show like that anyhow, and besides, the speculators has all the seats."

"The producers say they are giving the people what they want," observed the Head Barber.

"They are giving the people what the people are being taught to want by them producers," declared the Manicure Lady. "Gee, I don't know what this town is coming to. People are saying that it is getting wicked, but it ain't that. If it was only a little wicked with some brains thrown in, it wouldn't be so bad. The town ain't getting wicked, George—it's getting simple-minded. The town is wiggling and snapping its fingers like a cabaret dancer. The town is off its trolley and off the rails besides.

"The only plays that I ever liked, George, or at least the plays I liked the best of all, was the pretty old rural dramas. I know the wise fish nowadays wouldn't turn out to see a play like 'Shore Acres,' and if good old Denman Thompson was in his prime now he would starve. I can see them old plays now, when I shut my eyes. They was all about the same in a way, but they was all fine. There was always the old homestead, which at least one of the family didn't want sold. It had been the home of their dads and granddads, but some of the younger members of the family had moved to the city and got proud, and now the old homestead had to be sold.

"One little daughter stuck by the old home with her dad and mother. And in all of the plays she had a beau with an honest heart and warts on his thumbs. His father would own the next farm, of course, and it had always been the dream of the old folks that the two would marry and then the two farms would become one. Then along would come some young city fellow, usually a surveyor. He would be the villain, and I don't know why they always picked out that profession for a villain. There is a lot of surveyors that is perfect gents. Anyhow, he would come there with his city ways and his oily tongue, and he would steal that little gal away from her fair-minded Jasper beau. She would find out before it was too late that he was a villain, and while she was finding that out her Jasper beau would be finding out that there was oil on the old homestead and that the villain knew it all the time. The end of it would be that the surveyor would have to go back to his compass and the gal would marry her Abner, and the old homestead would be saved."

"They always had a swell male quartette of rubes in them shows, too," said the Head Barber. "I used to like to hear them singing 'My Old Kentucky Home' and 'Way Down Upon the Suwanee River.' I guess you are right when you say we are getting foolish in the head. And I suppose there won't be no more of them good old plays. It's too bad, too. Me and the Missus would go afterer if we could see something like that, but I ain't going to dig up four bones to go and see a problem play that deals with the same problem Adam and Eve know about. And I wouldn't go across the street to see a musical comedy no more; so when we don't go to vaudeville or the movies we have some friends up to the flat or go calling on them. That way we won't get poisoned none."

"You're right, George," said the Manicure Lady. "You have the right anecdote."

QUITE A SLIP

Mrs. Jackson never opened her mouth without putting her foot in it. The other day she told her daughter that she intended to go and comfort Mrs. Brown, whose husband had committed suicide by hanging himself in the attic of his house.

"Oh, mother," said her daughter, "don't go; you know you always say the wrong thing."

"Yes, I must go," answered the matter. "I will take great care and talk only about the weather; that will be a safe subject."

And this is how her scheme worked out:

"We have had very rainy weather lately, haven't we, Mrs. Brown?"

"Yes," replied the widow; "I haven't been able to get the week's washing dried."

"Oh," put in Mrs. Jackson, "I shouldn't think you'd have had any trouble, you have such a fine attic to hang things in."

The Girl Who Drinks and Smokes

This Question Is Not One of Propriety, Says Miss Fairfax, but One of Common Sense

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LITTLE writes me:

"Do you think it is proper or if it displays courtesy and kindness on the part of a young lady to light a gentleman's cigarette and pour out beer from a bottle into his glass at a public place?"

It is not a matter of propriety, my dear Lizette. Like many young girls you do not observe the different shades in the meaning of the word. If this is a question of propriety, then suicide becomes solely a matter of etiquette, and a query if it is "good form" for a girl to pour kerosene over her clothes and set them on fire is not a misuse of the English language.

Neither will you find in any authority as to the origin, derivation and meaning of words sanction for the words "courtesy" and "kindness" as you use them. They are gentle, well-bred words, and to apply them to such acts as lighting a man's cigarette and pouring out his beer in public places is but planting a rebel in a bed of poison ivy.

Neither would a "lady" show such attention to a "gentleman" in any place, public or private. But these words have been so universally abused that they have sunk to a low rank, and your use of them is not a misuse.

Let me write your question as it should be written:

"Do you think it is vulgar or if it displays recklessness and a spirit of indecency on the part of a woman to light a man's cigarette and pour out beer from a bottle into his glass when at a public place?"

HER POSITION

I certainly do! I think she lights more than a cigarette and she pours out more than beer.

She applies a match to her good name. She is starting a fire that will consume her future, leave little of the past which should have spoken well for her, and that will die without nothing to show for her life but the cold ashes of shame and regret.

She is pouring out humiliation, despair, sin, poverty, loneliness, grief, isolation from all that respectability holds dear, and a bitterness that will eat out her heart and soul.

She is committing moral suicide, a crime too serious to be guised as "courtesy" and "kindness."

My dear Lizette, any young woman who drinks intoxicating liquors with a man at public places destroys herself, and this is just as true if the drink is taken in a public place reeking with wealth as a cheap corner saloon reeking with the ill odors of tobacco and filth. The costly champagne glass has no higher moral tone than the poorest beer glass. There is an aristocracy of place that will sanction such an act.

No man with brains in his head smokes cigarettes, or, if he has the brains and smokes cigarettes he will not have the brains long. No man with respect for a young woman will drink beer and smoke cigarettes at a public table in her presence. It may be the custom in some countries, but it will never be a custom here with those who reverence the decencies.

A woman who will do that which you ask in "proper" encourages a man to be disrespectful of all women, a disrespect that will grow in a very short time into contempt for the woman who insisted it. She sanctions his ill-breeding and slips down into something worse in doing it.

LOSES HER RESPECT

Such a situation as you picture will never be the experience of the girl who respects herself. For never, under any circumstances, would she sit at a table in a public place with a man who drinks beer and smokes cigarettes, and, consequently, she never would meet the problem in "etiquette" that you submit for solution.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

NO one on earth but a mother can carry three suit cases, a baby and a basket, and manage six children and a dog trailing at her heels, and get to her destination without losing one of them.

A man would lose half the children and all his temper.

There alighted from a train one morning a woman carrying a baby on one arm; in her hands she held three suit cases and a basket, and there came trailing behind her six children with open mouths and wide eyes, and the last one dragged a dog.

The look of apprehension on the faces of the hundreds behind the gates, plainly telling a fear that they might draw the party of eight and a dog "lifted" when the woman approached a policeman and made inquiries for Lysander John Appleton. The officer didn't know, but he was plainly pleased to find out. He returned in a few moments, gave her the most minute directions how to reach No. 17 Hanecomb place, and assisted her to a car, even giving the conductor instructions.

The conductor had a car full, and many passengers he let out too soon, and others he carried blocks beyond their destinations, but he was so solicitous about the woman, seven children and a dog that he stopped the car in the middle of the street, and personally helped the woman, seven children and the dog off the car and across the street to the front door, in which kind act he was assisted by all the passengers. Their kindness did not cease here, for with encouraging smiles to the strangers they waited until some one answered the door bell to make sure for themselves that the Appletons were at home.

Do you wonder why every one was so solicitous? Because every one is just human enough to enjoy a joke like a woman, seven children and a dog, when the joke is on some other man.

Had the stranger been a man looking for Lysander John Appleton that he might will him seven million dollars, no one would have known where Lysander John lived, and the conductor would have derned them in a thirteenth place.

Moral: There are always those who will drop their own interests to help push another man's bad luck along.

GAVE HER AWAY

"You have had that parrot a long time now, Miss Laura, haven't you?" observed Percy Nicefellow to the young lady on whom he was making a call.

"Oh, yes, several years," was the response.

"Very intelligent, is he not?" went on Percy.

"Quite; he can imitate almost everything."

"Ah," continued Percy, "they have a remarkably clever bird at the Browns'. It can imitate the sound of a kiss to perfection. Is that among the accomplishments of our feathered friend in the corner?"

"No, it is not, sir," exclaimed the young lady, indignantly. "Whatever a parrot does is by imitation simply, and it is not likely that our bird would repeat a sound he is certainly not accustomed to hear."

Then the parrot chimed in:

"No, George, dear! Wait till I have taken this wretched bird out of the room."

CHILDREN MAY LOSE IN BANK CRASH

Out of the tangled affairs of the Traders' National Bank of Lowell—closed by order of the Comptroller of the Currency—the fact loomed today that hundreds of children were among the sufferers. The bank had advertised a special plan of Christmas savings, which attracted the children.

Confidence in the ultimate soundness of the bank was indicated today by profers of loans from other Lowell banks. The aid was declined. Bank Examiner Norwin S. Bean continued his examination of the books.

The investigation today disclosed that there were 15,000 depositors in the bank, and seventy shareholders. Alvi T. Baldwin, vice-president of the bank, who lives at the Hotel Somerset in Boston, is the largest stockholder, with 1014 shares.

The suspension followed an order issued last July that the bank increase its resources. Suspension was ordered, it is stated, because conditions had not materially improved. The bank has some connection with the suspended Atlantic National Bank of Providence.

The officers of the Lowell bank are Clarence Nelson, president; Alvi T. Baldwin and William F. Hill, vice-presidents; Amos T. Hill, cashier, and Edward T. Wilder, teller.

Mr. Baldwin, the largest present shareholder, has greatly increased his holdings recently. He owned but sixteen shares last year, but is now credited with 1014. He is treasurer of the Walpole Rubber Company.

Praises Cassidy; Asks Coal Inquiry

Reader Suggests That Often Inferior Quality Is Sold.

The following letter is self-explanatory.
Editor AMERICAN:

Every consumer of food in Massachusetts must feel under obligation to Mr. Cassidy. Certainly the facts have proved that a great deal of the food stuff sold is injurious to health. He has made the food adulterators and dopers fear the law.

I hope that he will go further and throw the searchlight of the AMERICAN on certain coal dealers. It is obvious that a rigid inspection would not be out of the way. I notice that we sometimes get a very inferior article. I think the people is worthy of Mr. Cassidy's consideration.

Yours very truly,

Cardinal O'Connell, with his suite, paid the gathering a visit, as did Mayor Fitzgerald. Both spoke briefly.

EXODUS FROM MEXICO CITY GROWS HOURLY

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21.—Terror-stricken by fears of a massacre if President Huerta is overthrown by the rebels, Spanish, French, German and English officers today are leaving Mexico as rapidly as possible.

Scores of Americans have already left here in the last forty-eight hours, but other foreigners had little thought of departure, believing they were safe until word was received that many of their fellow citizens were being held as hostages by the rebels at Torreon.

The foreigners are alarmed by reiterations of the report that the United States intends to recognize the Carranzistas as belligerents. They are further alarmed by dispatches telling of a statement sent by General Carranza to Los Angeles, Cal., in which he declared there would be no peace in Mexico while Huerta or any intriguing political party reigns.

Huerta's action in ordering a 50 per cent. tariff increase has caused consternation among merchants, many of whom say they will have to go out of business. The cost of living, which now is higher than ever before, will be greatly increased by the dictator's efforts to fill his treasury.

The edict was issued by Huerta, acting in place of Congress, and approved by him as President.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong and active this morning and the gains averaged large. There was better sentiment in trading circles over intimations from Washington that currency legislation will be more satisfactory to financial interests than the one defeated months recently. A compromise is expected.

At the end of the hour in Boston advances included Boston & Maine ½, New Haven 1¼, American Telephone ¾, Alaska Gold ¾, Butte & Superior 1⅛, Calumet & Arizona ½, Granby 1½, North Butte ¾, Old Dominion 1¼ and Tamarack ¾. United Fruit was off 1¼.

New York gains at that time embraced Canadian Pacific 4, Southern Pacific 1¼, United Pacific 2⅝, Reading 1, Lehigh Valley 2⅝, American Can 1, Steel 2⅝, Amalgamated 1⅜, Northern Ore 1⅜ and St. Paul 3.

New York Market Opened Strong.

When the New York market opened it had the firm tone which prevailed in late trading yesterday and prices advanced. The undertone was more satisfactory than for days. Trade was at 8:30 there so far this month. There was a good demand for a number of issues, including Amalgamated Copper and Pacific rose more than three points and several other issues sold a point or more higher around the start.

The largest transactions were in Steel, which opened ⅜ higher and within a brief period was selling above Tuesday's last quotation. Union Pacific advanced nearly two points, Amalgamated 1⅝, Reading ¾ and American Can ⅝, within a few minutes. Among the strongest issues were Utah Copper, Interboro-Met. and Missouri Pacific.

Coppers were benefited by reports that domestic consumers have begun to buy material and that business in Europe is brisk.

American stocks were above parity in London and Canadian Pacific was in strong demand.

Currency Bill Outlook Improved.

The outlook for the enactment of a currency bill at the present session of Congress has improved since President Wilson displayed a disposition to compromise with Senators who want the Glass-Owen measure amended. It is reported from Washington that he will not regard alterations in the section specifying the number of Federal reserve banks or that which designates the government officials who shall serve ex-officio on the reserve board as violating the principles of the measure. It was learned on high authority that these two changes will form one of the chief features in the compromise between the Senate committee and those who favor the House bill.

Senator O'Gorman, one of the "insurgent" members of the Banking Committee, thinks that there is a better chance of currency legislation at this session, and that a bill will be passed if unanimously reported out. But various members of the committee are insistent individually upon so many changes in the Glass-Owen bill that it is questioned if a unanimous report can be made. Changes suggested are as follows:

Number of regional reserve banks to be greatly reduced, to not exceeding five, or a central bank could be established at Washington, substituted with sufficient branches to provide for the business of the country.

Amount of capital stock to be subscribed by the member banks reduced from 10 per cent. of the capital stock, paid in, to 6 per cent. of the capital stock and surplus.

Dividends of the member banks in the regional reserves restricted to 6 per cent. and all surplus to go to the government.

Country banks to be permitted to continue their profits from exchange, which is abolished in the pending bill.

No members of the cabinet to be appointed on the Federal Reserve Board. The Secretary of the Treasury may be made a possible exception.

Reserves to be maintained in gold, and notes made redeemable in gold only and not "gold and lawful money."

Country banks to be given the privilege of aiding "seasonal" or long-time paper, under certain restrictions, as security for circulation.

National banks to be permitted to loan money on real estate up to a certain proportion of their resources to equalize them with respect to State banks and trust companies that enter the new system.

To Prevent Beef Trust Control.

That the "Beef Trust" operates all over the world instead of being an American institution only is becoming more apparent since the new tariff bill was passed and the country became a free market of lower-priced meat. Great hopes were entertained by consumers that they would benefit through the importation of Argentina beef.

Now it is claimed that the "Beef Trust" has control of the ocean and coast steamship facilities, which means they can control the price situation in the United States as thoroughly as ever. It is denied by an official of the steamship line concerned. But the government is paying attention to the matter. It is stated in Washington the Department of Justice will take immediate action to prevent the Beef Trust through any contracts for the storage facilities of the Lamport & Holt steamship line from getting control of the beef output of Argentina.

"If seen in such a contract the practical nullification of the benefits of the new tariff act through a monopoly of transportation and prices, and action to balk the effort to keep up the price of meat.

"The United States District Attorney at New York will be instructed tomorrow to begin investigation as to the nature of the contract, the purposes for which it was made and the effect it will have in stifling competition.

"The Attorney-General holds that no matter if such a contract be made to divide the country its effect would be a practical elimination of competition, and in so far as its terms would relate to shipments to ports of the United States, it could be successfully attacked in the courts as being illegal restraint of trade."

Boston Loses a Rate Fight.

When the Interstate Commerce Commission decided New York shall have the same westbound import rates as Boston for two years to come, cutting out the differential of 1 cent per pound on both class and commodity freights against Boston for railroads, this city lost a long battle. Now Boston is on a competitive basis with New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. New York had special advantages through local laws for delivery of import goods and Boston felt entitled to the differential. The decision has been pending for more than a year.

Financial News in Brief.

In the London copper warrants market this morning spot advanced 12s and futures 12s 6d.

For the year ended with June last Atchison's Bell operating revenue increased $2,774,500. The balance available for the common stock is equal to 8.61 per cent. on the $190,830,500 outstanding, as compared with 8.20 per cent. earned on $170,129,500 in the year previous.

French gold from Havana to the amount of $212,000 has been received by the New York agency of the National Bank of Cuba.

Gross earnings of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. for the last fiscal year were $24,315,887, compared with $24,268,452 for the previous one. The surplus for last year was $1,727,192.

Within two weeks railroads have ordered about 3,500 cars, 100 locomotives and 70,000 tons of rails. Pending orders are for 400,000 tons of rails and 6,000 cars.

NEW SULZER EXPOSURE OF TIGER'S RULE

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Another instalment of former Governor William Sulzer's sensational political expose of Tammany Hall methods was made public here today. Mrs. Sulzer is quoted as saying that Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, even threatened her in an attempt to have her influence her husband politically.

Mr. Sulzer said he wanted to tell his story fully and during the impeachment trial, but was prevented because of a court ruling which barred "testimony relating to outside matters." Here are some of the more important of the new charges:

1. More than $4,300,000 had been expended before Mr. Sulzer took office, on the certificate of the State architect of which there had been no proper audit. This resulted in the dismissal of State Architect Hooper.

2. Senator Frawley, chairman of the committee which investigated Governor Sulzer, protested against Hooper's removal. Later Hooper pleaded for a chance "to explain things to the chief" and an order went to Adams from Tammany Hall to delay action against him.

3. Highway contracts were fraudulent in almost every instance.

4. Tammany ward heelers plabed on the payrolls on contracts for Capitol work.

5. Judge Edward McCall of the Public Service Commission acting for Murphy called at the executive mansion in Albany and threatened Mrs. Sulzer, saying if her husband would have to do certain things or he would be destroyed.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway, controlled by many the world's greatest race course, may soon have a counterpart in Germany, if the plans of Adam Opel, a prominent subject of the Kaiser, who manufactures automobiles at Russelsheim, are realized. Speedway officials have been called on to furnish drawings and data of their track, it being the evident intention of the Teuton, piece by piece, to duplicate the American enterprise. Needless to say, the request has been cheerfully granted, the theory being that the boosting the game abroad will help at home.

In its international aspect, it is thought the inquiry presages a challenge by Germany for the speed supremacy of the world's automobiles for the track at present by the United States and France. Pressing to the front in aeronautics, tennis, track and yachting, she would now win for herself the palm of the automobile world also, to cause the envy of Jenatzy and Lautenschlager to live again.

Messrs. T. J. Glenn, W. H. Stevens and Joseph Donovan returned yesterday from a very successful hunting trip in Maine. They were lucky in their game and announced that they enjoyed one of the best outings in their experience.

Messrs. Nettleton, Crittenden and Cleary, comprising the Paige Motor Car Company of this city, are today entertaining the head of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company and the New England agents for the same. President Krohn of the home office reached Boston early this morning and held an interesting session with the New England Paige-Detroit dealers. At noon they were tendered a luncheon at the Hotel Lenox, where matters of interest were considered.

President Jewett believes that this is to be one of the biggest years in the history of the industry and feels that his company is in better shape than ever before for its ever increasing business.

H. L. Rittenhouse, who was located in Boston for several years as the head of the Boston branch of the Diamond Tire & Rubber Company, has been spending the last week or so in this city as the guest of Fred W. Suhr, the local manager of the Goodrich Tire Company. Mr. Rittenhouse left Boston yesterday for Dartell, where he is at present caring for the Goodrich interests.

Predicts Shake-Up at State Hospital

Dr. Thompson Back from Worcester Insane Asylum.

Dr. Charles T. Thompson, executive officer of the State Board of Insanity, who returned today from Worcester, where he has been investigating the charges that patients there are subjected to inhuman treatment, said the attendants at the State Insane Hospital are overworked and the food is poor, indicated, in an interview, that there may be a shake-up in the hospital force.

The charges were made by Dr. George W. Gale as the result of a petition bearing the names of thirty-six female attendants at the hospital.

Dr. Thompson, today: "I am not yet ready to make public the results of my investigation, but I will say that it has resulted in a great deal more than a number of changes in the management of the hospital."

Demands a Public Hearing by Council

Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston today sent an open letter to Chairman Frank L. Randall of the Prison Commission, Superintendent Erskine of the Rutland prison camp and Dr. Chamberlain, the camp physician, appear before it tomorrow. It is planned to hear those men in secret session.

OPEN TRIAL OF NORWOOD'S FORMER CHIEF

The trial of former Police Chief James W. Lavers of Norwood on twenty-one charges of alleged graft and incompetency began in a crowded town hall today with the testimony of William Barrett, patrolman, that the former chief had failed even to investigate Barrett's reports of liquor selling at Nos. 11-13 Dean street.

The trial is before the Selectmen, who have James A. Halloran to advise them. The immediate prosecution is conducted by J. S. Stone and H. Le B. Sampson. Mr. Lavers is defended by J. W. McAnarney of Quincy.

Gaston Boissonault, from the Burns Detective Agency of New York, is also in the room, assisting the prosecution.

More than three hundred and fifty men and women squeezed into the auditorium. So great was the interest in the politics situation.

It was reported that the Selectmen were to order Lavers' 44-calibre revolver seized when he entered, but it was learned that Lavers had entered wearing it when he was removed from office.

Patrolman Barrett, the first witness, testified that on June and July, August and November, 1912, and in February and March, 1913, he reported liquor selling on Dean street to Chief Lavers, but that the chief made no effort to investigate.

Patrolman Cornelius C. Murphy testified that he saw men drinking beer on the premises at Nos. 11-13 Dean street and reported it to Chief Lavers, who said:

"Well, the Italians must have their beer and they are going to sell."

LARGEST NET PAID CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

Good News—This Country Is Not to Be Disgraced by the Deportation of Mrs. Pankhurst

The AMERICAN is glad that this country is not to be disgraced and its inhabitants put to shame by the driving out of Mrs. Pankhurst, a courageous, devoted woman.

The AMERICAN has never recommended the methods of political propaganda practiced by Mrs. Pankhurst. Whether the English woman needs to strike terror into the heart of the English male in order to get him to perform an act of thought, may stand as an open question; certainly the methods of the English militant suffragists are not necessary in the United States.

But all such questions are entirely beside the point. The point is that the immigration authorities at New York ruled that this brave little old lady was NOT MORAL ENOUGH TO SET FOOT ON THE STREETS OF NEW YORK!

The AMERICAN is glad that the authorities at Washington overruled this action and decided to admit Mrs. Pankhurst to this country.

Mrs. Pankhurst is a POLITICAL AGITATOR, and no charge but political agitation has been made against her.

This country calls itself a land of freedom and of refuge and boasts that it will not turn a MAN away because of his political opinions or actions.

We have kept that boast as regards MEN.

We let Michael Davitt in and Redmond and many another Irish agitator or refugee—as we should.

We have taken in political refugees from Russia and have denied the Czar's request to send back such men.

MEN of courage have been received and honored—when their record was one of protest against injustice.

But for WOMEN it seemed at first that we had a DIFFERENT code.

Mrs. Pankhurst, on trial in England, told the judge to his face that she objected to be tried in a court of which one judge at least had been found dead in a brothel.

She meant to protest against such judging.

She cannot now return to England and say that she was turned away at the door to "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

What a blistering disgrace if an American administration had permitted such a blot to be put upon this country's name. We could have never again repeated with a straight face that women have with us the same rights as men.

We welcome as political refugees men who boast of their sympathy with dynamiters—because we feel that they have protested against wrong.

Yet, if the immigration authorities at New York had had their way, we would have shut out, as some wandering dog might be shut out, a courageous woman who has defied brutality, endured imprisonment and starvation, protesting against the system, as she told her judge, "That can send me to jail for fourteen years, and that limits to TWO years in prison the punishment of the man who ruined the twelve-year-old girl standing in this dock yesterday."

MEN that would plot to destroy the life of a Czar we will not allow to be extradited, for we say that their crime is political, and that this is the land that protects MEN fighting injustice, as our fathers fought it.

But for a WOMAN, whose crime has been such feeble protest as a woman can make against the injustice of centuries the immigration authorities at New York had no sympathy or compassion.

They would have sent her back. She had the temerity to denounce the English system that treats women as slaves—and that in the very court that sentenced HER to three years in jail sentenced to SIX WEEKS IMPRISONMENT A MAN CONVICTED OF RUINING THE MORALS OF SEVERAL YOUNG GIRLS.

But, fortunately for the honor and the good name of this country, their decision was not final. They did not have their way and Mrs. Pankhurst walks the streets of New York today, a free woman.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

LIGHT AND DARK EYES

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your discussion on the relative merits of light and dark eyes has been most interesting. Evidently J. M. P. is not yet convinced of the truth of your statements. Possibly together we can enlighten him.

Blue and gray eyes are found invariably in light complexioned people. Brown and black eyes in dark complexions. The nearer the equator the darker the skins, likewise the further away the fairer races prevail. This difference in pigmentation has its reason in that dark skins snap the better withstand the sun's rays. To do their best work such people require a warm climate. Their energy or power is thus static or stored. They draw on it cautiously, which makes for indolence and lacks aggressiveness.

On the other hand, fair skinned people are sensitive to outside influence, less dependant on sun. They thus create their own energy, their force is dynamic, which explains their aggressiveness, their alert minds and their tendency to grasp opportunities. Such types are natural born leaders, as proven by the lives of great men.

But take heart, you brown, sad-eyed, disconsolate ones. We all can't be generals, ride a horse and carry a sword. The great majority follow on behind, each one with a gun on his back and kicking mud.

Remembering all the time that it is up to us to do our work well and to get all the happiness there is in life.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Chapter XL.

MARY FLETCHER had dreaded confessing to her mother-in-law what she had learned on her visit downtown. She was dazed and stunned by her morning's experiences, yet she felt that this was no time for subterfuge and was determined to tell all that had happened—with the exception of her encounter with Gordon Craig. She remembered with a thrill of relief that Bert's mother had never heard of this man, and she tried to forget that she herself had seen him again. This was made the easier by the painful thoughts that came thronging to her mind. Where was Bert? Would he return? How would she and the baby live? She could not be a burden to her husband's mother any longer. Though she had sinned in marrying a man she did not love, heaven knew she was being punished for it!

As soon as she entered the small flat, her pale face showed to the woman anxiously waiting there that her errand had been as disastrous as she had feared it might be. Yet Bert's mother gave evidence of no surprise when she heard the news that her son's wife pityingly imparted to her.

"It's only what I feared!" she declared, "yes, it's what I feared!"

"But what are we to do!" exclaimed Mary. She had thrown off her coat and hat and was walking up and down the floor. She was too excited, too restless to sit still, yet she was so tired that walking was an effort. "Baby and I must live! We cannot be dependent on you. Oh, if there was anything that we knew certainly! Here am I, desolate as if I were a widow, yet so uncertain as to what is ahead of me that I dare not go out and try to find occupation. Bert may come home tomorrow and demand that baby and I return to Middlebrook."

She shuddered, but the other woman laughed harshly. "Well," she muttered, "if what I suspect is true, he won't do that!"

Mary stopped abruptly. "What do you suspect?" she demanded. "What do you mean? Do you know anything more than I do about this matter?"

"No, I don't know anything for sure," Mrs. Fletcher said, "but I shall soon. Meanwhile, don't ask me no more questions or I'll go crazy!"

She gave vent to a dry sob, then controlled herself. "I guess I'm losing all the senses I ever had," she apologized. "I used to flatter myself that nothin' never upset me. Law—when my husband was alive I ran the whole concern, even managed all the money he made, and even when he died I never turned a hair, and I took care of Bert until he was able to take care of himself. But I tell you, child, there ain't anything takes the starch out of you like disgrace. And that's what we're facin' now—you an' me."

She was silent for a minute. "Well, there ain't no use in talkin' over things we don't know nothin' about," she said at last. "All we can do is to wait developments. I think we'd best agree to play a waitin' game for a day or two yet. Shall we?"

And Mary, wondering, could but agree.

Two days later Mary Fletcher learned the truth. Her mother-in-law had been away all the morning—"on business," she said. Mary washed and dressed her child, busied herself about the flat, took the baby out for an airing, returned and put him to sleep before she heard her hostess' step on the stairs. Mrs. Fletcher's tread was always heavy, but today it sounded slower than usual, and it was with a sense of apprehension that Mary ran out into the hall. Putting her arm about her as he gained the top stair, she drew her mother-in-law into the little parlor and began to remove her bonnet.

"You look tired out," she said gently. "Now don't try to talk until you get your breath."

Mrs. Fletcher, senior, said nothing until she had put away her coat, bonnet and gloves. Then she told Mary to come into the bedroom, and close the door tightly.

"Even though the child's asleep, I don't wish that this matter should be mentioned where he is," said the grandmother, her hands clenched. "Oh, Mary, Mary, it's all just as I feared! Oh, my son, my son!"

The woman Mary had once considered hard and unemotional broke down and sobbed aloud as she tried to tell Bert's wife the shameful story of his dissipation, his infidelity. Moved by a rigid sense of justice as she saw it, she had employed a detective—("although it cost me about all I had after my boy had cheated me," she said)—to watch her son. She had learned today that he had for months been "running another establishment over in Philadelphia."

"I wonder if that other woman thinks she is his real wife!" she exclaimed.

Then as she tried to go on with a list of the many shameful things her only son had done, her voice quavered again and broke.

"Oh," she moaned, "I wish he was dead! I wish that he had died when he was a decent little boy!"

To her own surprise Mary found herself putting her arms about the weeping mother—changed, suddenly, it seemed, to an old woman, and trying to comfort her.

"There, there!" she soothed, as she might have spoken to a frightened child.

After some minutes Bert Fletcher's mother recovered her self-control and was able to talk coherently. She had discovered where he was living, she said, and would have her own lawyer take steps to inform him that his wife knew the facts of his double life, and that she never wished to see him again.

"He can't even claim his child," she said in reply to Mary's anxious question. "The law will give the baby to you, for not only has the father been unfaithful to you, but he has deserted you and failed to support you. You must go your way and be his."

Mary Fletcher was in the grip of a great disgrace, but she was so honest with herself that she appreciated that in her inner consciousness was a sense of relief that at last the worst had come and that by the laws of God and man she had a right to free herself from the fetters that had eaten into her very soul.

THE GRIND

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

IT is not the patient labor of the man that tills the soil,
Though his muscles slowly stiffen after years of steady toil.
He must creep away to slumber ere the darkness shrouds the earth;
He must start anew his plodding when the birds first thrill their mirth;
But no blight is cast upon him at the moment of his birth.

It is not the rough endeavor of the men that sail the seas,
Though great Neptune's home is latticed with the bones of such as these.
God can blow them with his bellows from a long expected coast
Out to meet the Flying Dutchman, captained by a gibbering ghost.
But they are not doomed to failure, even they who suffer most.

No. The grind is in the city, where too many beings strive,
Where the weak, all unconsidered, drop like dead bees from a hive.
There the grind is grim and ghastly; there the herd must squirm and shove,
Trampling on the weaker mortals God intended they should love.
Yet the strongest swimmers dinger, glad to keep their heads above.

The Sin of Knowing Nothing

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

BRIEUX again! I have always known that the sin of doing nothing is the deadliest of the seven deadly sins. Brieux is alive to teach the world that the sin which hides in the shadow and whimpers "I did not know" ranks second in malevolence.

Since I wrote for the AMERICAN a respectful remonstrance addressed to the women of a club who had burned Brieux, I have attended a public performance of "Damaged Goods" in New York. I was awed, silenced, solemnized. And I was humiliated. The stage is doing what the pulpit dare not or cannot do. I dare not preach this sermon. I do not know any preacher in the city who would dare. And yet, for myself, I do not know whether I ought not to seek forgiveness, for my shrinking of soul. At least, I thank God that the theatre has dared to do what I fear to attempt.

It seems probable that about two hundred thousand persons have seen the play.

* * *

First of all, the character of the audience interested me.

Young men and young women were in the majority. Very young men and women, youths even and young girls, were present. Girls had come accompanied by men. They sat through the whole of the performance without apparent distress. There was no indecorum. There did not seem to be any sense of impropriety. I was told that once, and only once, there was some foolish giggling. Mr. Bennison, in the great role of the Physician, stopped and said: "This is a very serious matter, and we have only consented to produce this play under a compelling sense of seriousness. If the young women who are calling attention to themselves do not appreciate this, they may be excused and may have the price of their tickets returned at the office." Two or three foolish persons among two hundred thousand of the American public—it is a fine record.

* * *

It is significant of the day we live in that tens of thousands of young people should see this play, should see it together, and should see it without any feeling of wrongdoing. Times have changed: it is preposterous to blind our eyes to this fact. It is useless to burn Brieux—for Brieux is burning himself, his convictions, his living gospel, into the mind and conscience of our generation. And, with great respect to the ladies who have books to burn, this is for the blessing of the world.

Not less significant was the applause. I knew the play. I could pass an examination in it. What I wanted to know was the effect of the play upon a metropolitan representation of the young manhood and young womanhood of America. The places at which they broke with loud applause into the terrific solemnity of the hour must be noted. In Carlyle's phrase, "It boded things." I am not speaking of the applause which greeted the actors, a testimony to their good work; that is a matter of course. I mean the occasions when a speech was interrupted, the feelings of the audience finding expression in passionate approval of the author's views.

In the third act the Doctor is talking with the father of the injured wife. Here is the dialogue:

DOCTOR—When the marriage was proposed you doubtless made inquiries concerning your future son-in-law's income; you investigated his securities; you satisfied yourself as to his character. You only omitted one point, but it was the most important of all: you made no inquiries concerning his health.

LOCHES—No.

DOCTOR—And why?

LOCHES—Because it is not the custom.

DOCTOR—Well, it ought to be made the custom——

And the applause stopped him.

This is very important. Legislators may well take notice of it. Preachers like myself are bound to consider it. Clergymen of the Episcopal Church in Chicago have adopted a plan of demanding such certificates of health. I am not yet convinced that this is the right way to go about it. Yet it is clear that something is going to happen in this wonderful new world of ours.

* * *

But to return to the play. The Doctor resumes: "Before giving his daughter in marriage a father ought to take as much care with regard to her husband as a house of business takes in engaging an employe." And again the audience cheered.

Women are usually victims. Wives are polluted by their husbands. And the women led the cheering—young, apparently unmarried, women and girls led the cheering. Let it be added to the credit of the men, they joined in the applause. It looks as though women were at last going to demand from men the cleanliness of life which men have always demanded from their women.

Next in importance was the applause which greeted the demand for police interference with a system which leaves boys to the enticements of evil women. A father whose boy has gone wrong and who has contracted disease is now talking with the Doctor, and the father says: "Is it right, sir, that that should be allowed? Aren't there enough police to prevent children of fifteen from being seduced like that? I ask, is it right?" The Doctor answers "No." And the audience cheered. It is not right. It is wrong. And the wrong thing is going to be stopped.

* * *

The enthusiasm of approval reached its height when the Doctor exclaimed hotly:

"The mystery and humbug in which physical facts are enveloped ought to be swept away and young men be given some pride in the creative power with which each one of us is endowed. They ought to be made to understand that the future of the race is in their hands and to be taught to transmit the great heritage they have received from their ancestors intact with all its possibilities to their descendants."

This is great teaching. And we shall hear more of it. This is no passing craze, no fad. This is not "freak legislature," nor yet freak imagination. This is the sort of world we or our children after us are going to live in. The whole burden of the Brieux play is "I did not know." This is the brooding sadness which hangs over it from first to last. This is the tragedy which finds its climax in widespread ruin and horror: "I did not know."

THE LURE OF THE UNUSUAL

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHEN I beheld a howling mob who raved and fought and tore
For half a dozen blocks around a city playhouse door,
I felt a trifle curious, and stopped a passer-by,
Who came careering toward the scene, to ask the reason why.
"Is Bryan on the board again?" I asked with whispering awe,
"Or has the management engaged my old friend Harry Thaw?"
"They want to see a thing," he said, "that they ain't never seen.
The show that opens there tonight is ab-so-lute-ly clean!"

When I observed a timid maid in raiment trim and neat,
By two big burly traffic cops escorted up the street,
I wondered why such things should be—I wondered this aloud—
Addressing in the general way the hurrying, shouting crowd.
"Is Mrs. Pankhurst in our midst?" I shuddered in affright,
"Or have they got the principal in some gang-women fight?"
"You're wrong both times," a cop replied, "I'll give you one more guess,
This dame has been collecting crowds with that there modest dress!"

I happened in a carbaret to trifle with a clam,
But could not swing my knife and fork amid the seething jam.
"For why I asked a neighbor, "does this teeming multitude
Invade this hot and stifling place—it cannot be for food—
For since I've been here I have found that one is quite unable
To take his sustenance when folks are sitting on his table?"
"Huh! You ain't wise to much!" he said, with a contemptuous glance,
"They're here because a couple does a downright decent dance!"
